where the lighthouse stands. A storm wind was blowing. The strong sea breezes made tepid by the sun, came to me impregnated with sharp saline odors. Before me the ocean unrolled its waves upon the fine sand, like a green serpent prolonging the shining coils in the sun. Behind me was the cliff, with its gray fissures, whence jetted out here and there the trunks of sickly trees, brawny growths, and meager fulze plants. Sloping inward almost at the head of the cliff yawned a mysterious cavern, a spacious grotto—dark and cold.

dence, but the weather was bad. All day and night a mighty wind was blowing from the sea, and the sailors muttered in sear: "It is Our Lady of Guadalupe passing by!" Our Lady of Guadalupe, the pale Madonna with the green eyes, who when she passeth by taketh with her in her ghostly flight all who are belated upon the vast gray sea.

"I will return in eight days," said Maxime Sarrabeyrous, as he kissed the red lips of his sweetheart.

But the eight days passed, and then a month—two months—three months—went by without any news of the handsome contrabandista. Pascaline cried from morning until night. As soon as her work was done she would hurry to the clift, to remain there for long hours at a time, with eyes fixed upon the Spanish coast. Ah! had she only been free, how swiftly would she not have departed in search of her betrothed, beyond the mountains towering between her and love! But she could not go; she must support the aged father. One night a cruel rumor came that Maxime had been killed by the custom house officers. And in fact a whole year passed without further news of him.

THE CENTURY for April is remarkable for the variety of its contents. Two of Mr. Cole's charming artistic engravings accompany a paper on Giovanni Bellini, by Mr. W. J. One of these engravings is printed as a frontispiece, and the conductors of the magazine claim that conductors of the magazine claim that some must be as well, and we know of American wood-engraving has never before been put to such important use as in this series. Text of the Lesson, Luke vi, 27-38-Com mit Verses 35-37-Golden Text, Luke vi, 31-Commentary by the Rev. D. M.

mission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadel-phin.]

After the healing of the palsied man, as recorded in our last lesson, Jesus called Matthew to be one of His disciples, and was entrained by him at Capernaum. He then visited Jerusalem, healed the man at the pool of Bethesah, and uttered the discourse recorded in John v. We next find Him healing a man with a withered hand in the synagogue at Capernaum on a Sabbath day, thus greatly provoking the Pharisses, who determined to kill Him (Matt. xii, 13, 14). Shortly after this He went out into a mountain and continued all night in prayer to God, after which He called His disciples to Him and from them chose twelve apostles, that they should be with Him, and that He might send them forth to preach, and to have power to which He came these twelve aposties, that they should be with Him, and that He might send them fort to preach, and to have power to heal sicknesses and to cast out devils (Mark iii, 14, 15; Luke vi, 12, 13. Then follows the discourse of which our lesson today forms a part. It is a repetition of a portion of the sermon on the mount (Matt. v-vii), but delivered under different circumstances.

27. "But I say unto you which hear, Love your enemies, do good to them which hate you." See this in the Old Testament in Ex. XXIII. 4, 5; Lev. xix, 17, 18; Prov. xix, 21, 22. See it also repeated in verse 33 of our lesson, with the encouragement that our reward shall be great and we shall be "Sons of the Most High" (R. V.), or, in other words, "as Christ Himself" (Luke i, 32, R. V.) Observe that these precepts are not for any who are not Christians, as if thereby they might win heaven, for "by the deeds of the law there shall no flesh be justified in His sight" (Rom. iii, 20); but for those who profess to be His followers, having received Him as their Saviour and Lord; that thus they may prove the sincerity of their discipleship.

28. "Bless them that curse you, and pray for them which despitefully use you." Putting together the four precepts of this and the preceding verse, we have only to say with the poor Indian to whom a missionary read these words: "This Indian can't do it; if God will make a new Indian perhaps he can." The natural man cannot do these God-like acts, but the Spirit of Christ in any man, woman or child can do again what the same spirit did in Christ Himself.

an." The natural man cannot do these God-like acts, but the Spirit of Christ in any man, woman or child can do again what the same spirit did in Christ Himself.

29. "Unto him that smitch thee on the one check offer also the other; and him that taketh away thy cloak forbid not to take thy coat also." The previous precepts may include only thoughts, looks and words on the part of our enemies, but here is personal violence and the spoiling of personal property, and are we still to be quiet! Peter reminds us that Christ suffered for us, leaving us an example that we should follow His steps; and Paul says, "Why do ye not rather take wrong! Why do ye not rather take wrong! Why do ye not rather suffer yourselves to be defrauled?" He also commends those who took joyfully the spoiling of their goods of Pet. ii, 21; 1 Cor. vi, 7.

30. "Give to every man that asketh of thee; and of him that taketh away thy goods ask them not again." Stier, in his "Words of the Lord Jesus," says that we are to say with our hearts as well as with our lips to the impetuous maker of these demands: "Although! I am not bound by any obligation of external right or law, yet am i, according to the spirit and law of love, both willing and obliged to serve thee and every man; that which thou art disposed to enforce from me, I will do for thee in free will and double measure, preventing thy sin by my kindness." Yet it is not the Lord's will to impose it upon His disciples as an absolute necessity to render every service that may in this evil world be demanded of them, any more than He requires them to allow all their property to be taken from them, or to tolerate every kind of personal insult. He enjoins only the requisite disposition of mind. We must, of course, oppose the sinner as such, and his sin, even as we resist the devil, the wicked one, whose malignity shows itself in each individual sinner.

31. "And as ye would that men should do as we resist the devil, the wicked one, whose malignity shows itself in each individual sinner.

31. "And as ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise." In Matt. vii, 2, Ho adds, 'For this is the law and the prophets." To love one's neighbor as one's self is the sum of our whole duty to our fellow man, but back of this lies the command to love God with all our heart and soul and strength and mind; and yet farther back, and first of all, a knowledge of the love of God to us in giving Himself for us.

32. "For if ye love them which love you, what thank have yet for sinners also love those that love them." Yet many people give as a reason for thinking themselves Christinas that "they love the brothern," not considering this verse, or that unless their love extends to their enemies they have nothing to boast of in the way of evidence. All these things are traits of a love which has no native origin in human hearts, but emanates from the being of God descending into the

NATIVES OF NORTHERN CHINA.

They Are Slaves to Opium and Kill Their Female Children.

They Are Slaves to Optum and Kill Their Female Children.

Rev. Athanasino Goette, a priest of the Franciscan order, who has been eight years a missionary in northern China, next to the Chinese wall and Mongolia, arrived in San Francisco on the steamer City of Peking. A Chronicle reporter saw him at the home of the Franciscan brothers, Golden Gate avenue, and he recounted many interesting facts relative to his experiences in the province of Shensi, where he mainly labored.

"To get there," he said, "I went by steamer 700 miles from Shanghai to Hankow, up the Yang-tse; then on a Chinese boat for fifty dayson the Han River. Then we took mules and rode eighty days over what are called the Southern Mountains, when we finally arrived at Singanfou, the old imperial city of China. This city is the capital of the province and has 800,000 inhabitants. There we have two churches, a college, and a school of about eighty Chinese children. These children we have picked up from the graveyards, where they were thrown to die. They are all girls, Lately, since the Chinese know we take care of them, when female children are born they are brought to our doorsteps and left there.

male children are born they are brought to our doorsteps and left there.

"Bishop Pagnucci, of the province, which is as large as France, lives at Koolen, thirty miles from Singanfou. There is a seminary there. The bishop has been there twenty-six years. Neither he nor I ever had any trouble with the natives. Sometimes we have to look out a little for the Chinese students, that is all. The Chinese of the north are a much finer class of people than those of the south. There are now about 30,000 Christians in the province. Not far from the Chinese wall is a massive monument, erected in the Seventh century A. D. On it is inscribed the whole history of the creation and the story of Christ. A good deal of the inscription yet remains. Six hundred and twenty years after Christ there were missionaries where I have been laboring."

Father Goette says the production and use of opium in Shensi are having an extremely demoralizing effect on the people. The emperor has forbidden the production of opium, but the mandarins permit it for the reason that they have secretly laid a tax on it and are growing rich from it. Father Goette says he has seen as much as forty acres of opium in one field. Three-lift fits of the people are absolute slaves to the derig.

A Story of Mr. Astor.

A Story of Mr. Astor.

The following story illustrating the Astor philosophy in money matters is told of the late John Jacob Astor by the man who was the other actor in the scene. "I went to Mr. Astor," he said, "with a business proposition which demanded an investment of $100,000 on his part. While listening to the plan he kept groping and feeling about on the floor for something he seemed to have dropped. When I had finished he said readily: 'All right; go on with the affair; I'll furnish the money,' At that instant a man entered to tell him that one of his buildings had just burned down.

"That happens nearly every day,' he said, with the utmost unconcern, and went on feeling about with great care for that something on the carpet. "I finally asked him what he had dropped." "Why,' he said raising his head."

"I finally asked him what he had dropped.
"Why,' he said, raising his head and looking as weebegone as a small boy, 'I dropped ten cents here a few moments ago and I can't find it. If a man's buildings burn down, they are gone and he can't help it, and he is bound to let them go. But a man who deliberately throws away ten cents because he won't take the trouble to find it is not to be forgiven."—New York Evening Sun.

ALPHABET ON TWINE

ALPHABET ON TWINE.

How Facts and Ideas Have Been Recorded on Cord by Blind Men.

Many years ago two men in Edinburgh, Robert Milne and David Macbeath, whe were both blind, invented an alphabet of knots tied upon a string, which was not only of a simple nature, but capable of expressing ideas of the most abstruse kind and of recording facts of any description. This invention was quite original; neither of the inventors had ever heard either of the inventors had ever heard either of the Peruvian quipos or the Jewish cords. In their efforts they were only guided by a desire of producing something which might be useful to their breth ren in the same unfortunate condition and of communicating at a distance with each other.

This string alphabet was a great deal more simple than those of the Peruvians. The twenty-six letters of the alphabet are divided into seven classes, proceeding straightforward from A to Z. Each class consists of four letters, which comprehends but two. The first four letters, or A B C D, are each formed by a large round knot; the second four, or E F G H, by a knot projecting from the string; the third four, or I J K L, by a knot vulgarly called a drummer's plait; the fourth four, or M N O P, by a simple noose; the fifth four, or Q R S T, by a noose with a net knot formed upon it; and the seventh class, or Y and Z, by a twisted noose. Thus, there are just seven different kinds of knots to indicate the whole letters of the alphabet.

But to distinguish each of the four letters in a class from the others, the expedient was adopted of adding a common small knot at a lesser or greater distance from the letter to which it belongs; B is the same knot repeated, with the small knot an inch distant, and D is the same knot repeated, with the small knot an inch distant.

The same plan goes on throughout; so that, by first feeling the kind of same content that feeling the kind of same contents.

ed, with the small knot an inch distant.

The same plan goes on throughout; so that, by first feeling the kind of knot, and then feeling whether it has a small knot attached, and at what distance, any letter can be instantly told. The length of this string alphabet is little more than three feet, and any blind individual with the ordinary sense of touch may learn the whole in an hour.—New York Ledger.

A Queer Occupation.

"Ant farmers," though only numbering a half dozen or so in Paris, are by no means to be overlooked in a study of odd trades. One, for instance, rejoices in the name of Mile, Blanche. She is not prepossessing in appearance. Her skin looks like dried pippins, and is tanned like crocodile idde. "She has leather guantlets and trousers, a regular coat of armor, but, notwithstanding this, she is grawed and bitten by her ungrateful stock to such an extent that she is perfectly hideous. She sleeps in the middle of the sacks of ants, and her epidermis has become so insensible to the bites of those insects that she slumbers soundly and sweetly while hundreds of them are endeavoring to extract a meal from her thick skin.

Probably no one thing has caused such a general revival of trade at II. L. Their trade is simply enormous in this very valuable article from the fact that it always cures and never disappoints. A judge had made a decision particularly galling to a young advocate, who had been arguing for an hour on the wrong side. "Your honor," exclaimed the lawyer in his indignation, "if that decision is law I will burn every book in my library." "Better read them," was the laconic comment.

THE VIRTUES OF APPLES.

Their Medicinal Value and Some of the Troubles Whiten They Ald.

Chemically the apple is composed of vegetable fiber, albumen, sugar, gum, chlorophyll, malic acid, gallic acid, lime and much water. Furthermore, the German analysts say that the apple contains a larger percentage of phosphorus than any other fruit or vegetable. This phosphorus is admirably adapted for renewing the essential nervous matter, lethicin, of the brain and spinal cord. It is, perhaps, for the same reason, rudely understood, that old Scandinavian traditions represent the apple as the food of the gods, who, when they felt themselves to be growing feeble and infirm, resorted to this food for renewing their powers of mind and body. Also, the acids of the apple as time food of the gods, who, when they felt themselves to be growing feeble and infirm, resorted to this food for renewing their powers of mind and body. Also, the acids of the apple are of signal use for men of sedentary habits, whose livers are sluggish in action; these acids serving to eliminate from the body noxious matters which, if retained, would make the brain heavy and dull, or bring about jaundice or skin eruptions and other allied troubles.

Some such an experience must have led to our custom of taking apple sauce with roast pork, rich goose and like dishes. The malic acid of ripe apples, either raw or cooked, will neutralize any excess of chalky matter engendered by eating too much meat. It is also the fact that such fresh fruits as the apple, the pear and the plum, when taken ripe and without sugar, diminish acidity in the stomach rather than provoke it. Their vegetable salts and juices are converted into alkaline carbonates, which tend to counteract acidity.

A good, ripe, raw apple is one of the Their Medicinal Value and Some of the Troubles Which They Aid.

and juices are converted into alkaline carbonates, which tend to counteract acidity.

A good, ripe, raw apple is one of the easiest of vegetable substances for the estomach to deal with, the whole process of its digestion being completed in eighty-live minutes. Gefrard found that the "pulps of roasted apples mixed in a wine quart of faire water, and labored together until it comes to be as apples and ale—which we call lambswool—never faileth in certain diseases of the raines, which myself hath often proved, and gained thereby both crowns and credit." "The paring of an apple, cut somewhat thick, and the inside whereof is laid to hot, burning or running eyes at night, when the party goes to bed, and is ited, or bound to the same, doth help the trouble very speedily, and contrary to expectation an excellent secret."

A poultice made of rotten apples is of very common use in Lincolnshire for the cure of weak or rheumatic eyes. Likewise in the Hotel des Invalides at Paris, an apple poultice is used commonly for inflauned eyes, the apple being roasted and its pulp applied over the eyes without any intervening substance. Long ago it was said apples are easily and speedily digested, and a modern maxim taches that "If you cat an apple going to bed, the doctor then will beg his bread."—London Hospital.

What to Eat at Night.

What to Eat at Night.

The true course is to begin with just one or two mouhtfuls the last thing before going to bed. And this should be light food, easily digested. No cake or pastry should be tolerated. One mouthful of cold roast beef, cold lamb cold chicken and a little crust of bread will do to begin with, or, what is better yet, a spoonful or two of condensed milk (not the sweetened that comes in cans) in three times as much warm water. Into this cut half a pared peach and two or three little squares of bread, the whole to be one-fourth or one-sixth of what would be a light lunch.

Increase this very gradually, until at the end of a month or six weeks the patient may indulge in a bowl of milk, two peaches, with a half hard roll or a crust of home made bread. When peaches are gone take baked apples with the milk till strawberries come, and cat the latter till peaches return again. This is the secret of health and vitality. We often work until after midnight, but cating the comfortable meal is the last thing we do every night of the year. This is not an untried experiment or one depending on the testimony of a single witness.—American Analyst.

The Requisites of a Hauband.

A certain pretty little girl, with great big serious blue eyes, was telling her companion on the street car why she was going to marry George. "You see, Maime," she said, "George is awfully good looking; he always sends me flowers when we go to the theatre; he never seems to be so shockingly busy, don't you know; he's got plenty of money, and he does just like I tell him." Prospective husbands, there is a catologue of the requisites.—Memphis Times.

In the President's Room.

"You would be surprised," said the guard in the president's room at the Capitol, "to know how often visitors come in here and, after looking about at the general effect of the furnishing and decorations, which, you observe, are red, ask:

"'And where can we find the Blue room we have heard so much about?

"They have mixed up the Capitol and the White House in their minds, of course. Constantly people inquire of me where the president's living quarters are—whether at this end of the Capitol or the other,"

"Are people permitted to come into the president's room, sit down and stay as long as they like?" asked the reporter.

"Mest amphatically not. The room."

the president's room, sit down and stay as long as they like?" asked the reporter.

"Most emphatically not. The room would be used as a sort of club by the loungers of the Capitol if we permitted anything of that sort. The time allowed people to stay is five minutes. If visitors overstay that limit they are politely requested to leave. Why, I have known folks to come here and bring their lunch, evidently with the intention of enting it on the center table, or of picknicking on the sofas. Such persons are apt to think it an outrage that they should not be allowed so trifling an accommodation. This is the most comfortable room in the Capitol, and it is not surprising that people should want to take a rest here incidentally to the fatigue of sight seeing. We have to devote our attention chiefly to repressing visitors of the sort I speak of and to looking out for vanials who want to cut the tassels off the chairs as mementoes, to take slices out of the sofas for the same purpose or to snip pieces off the curtain to remember the president's room by. Women frequently come in here, and, taking off their bonnets, prink to the full of the five minutes allowed them before the long mirrors."—Washington Star.

A Woman's Presence of Mind.

Mrs. Richard Barker, of Swansea, Mass., secured a servant from a Boston intelligence office, and everything went well for a week. One day the girl was working about as usual, and Mrs. Barker, who is a slight, frail woman, was alone with her. Suddenly the servant threw up both hands and exclaimed: "I have had a vision, and am ordered to offer up a sacrifice." Without any further explanation she started into the kitchen, seized a carving knife and began diligently to whet it in true Shylock fashion, muttering to herself strangely all the time.

Mrs. Barker saw that she was at the mercy of a crazy woman, and for a second or two fright almost overcame her. She knew that she would be no match for the servant in a struggle. Moreover, if she attempted to make her escape she felt that the knife sharpening would come to an end and the attack would commence. It was at this point that Mrs. Barker displayed unusual nerve and wit. Acting on the principle that it is often well to hunor the insane as far as possible, she threw up her hands, and, imitating the servant's manner, said: "I, too, have had a vision. There is a letter for you at the postoffice, and you must go for it at once." The servant, pleased to discover her mistress a kindred spirit, dropped the knife and rushed out of the door, bareheaded, in great haste to get possession of that imaginary letter. Mrs. Barker bolted the door against the girl, but the latter had escaped by train to Boston before she could be caught.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Savings Banks' Patron

Savings Banks' Patrons.

"People of what nationality patronize savings banks the most?"

"The Germans are by long odds our best customers. As a race they are thrifty and saving. The moment a young German begins to earn moment a young German begins to earn moment a young German begins to save it, no matter how small the wages he may be getting. Nor when he has once begun does he stop. His deposits flow in ma constant stream until they reach the limit, or until the young man has saved enough with which to start business for himself.

"Next to the Germans I think you may place those of Irish descent, so far at least as saving is concerned. When opening an account here they keep the fact seeret, even to the members of their own families. Many of them, of course, are servant girls, who save a great deal of money, some of them accumulating as high as $2,000."—Interview in Brooklyn Eagle.

**Dirids That Appear to Reason.**

Frank Buchland gives several curious instances of the special habits of some birds in procuring their food. The blackbirds, thrushes, etc., carry snails considerable distances for the purpose of breaking their shells against some rock or stone. Thomas Edward, the Scottish naturalist, describes gulls and ravens flying to a great height with crab or other shellfish, and letting them fall on stones in order to smash the shells; and, if they do not break on the first attempt, he says they pick them up again and carry them yet higher, repeating the operation again and again till the shell is broken. Ravens often resort to this contrivance. Darwin tells of a bird having been repeatedly seen to hop on a poppy stem, and shake the head with his bill till many seeds were scattered, when its prang to the ground and ate up the seeds.—Month.

Engineers are Human.

Engineers as a class are probably the most industrious, sober and intelligent of all men engaged in skilled mechanical labor. They unquestionably have a thorough appreciation of the responsibility of their duties, and conduct themselves accordingly; but the theory that they have no thought while on duty save the all absorbing one of snatching human beings from the jaws of death, and that the fear of danger to their passengers so constantly gnaws at their hearts that their hair turns gray and their backs bend beneath the terrible load, is one of the most ridiculous fancies imaginable.—

United by a String.

United by a String.

Nearly a year ago fisherman W. T. Van Dyke, while pursuing his occupation off shore, invitingly threw out a fishing line with two well baited hooks, writes the fishing reporter of The Long Branch News. Presently there was a jerk—the bait had "took." Van Dyke was hauling in hand over hand, when suddenly the tension ceased and the line was gracefully and advoitly whisked into the boat minus both hooks. Last fall Mr. Van Dyke, in emptying one of his "pounds" of its over night catch, discovered among his captives a "pig" fish and a sen bass united by a bit of lishing cord, which he readily identified as his own.

A hook had penetrated the jaw of each fish, and becoming imbedded there, the flesh had grown around their barbs and thus securely fastened them in position. Thus held together for nearly a twelve month they had coursed the briny in double team, held by a single twine, till death cut their thread of life in twain. The skeletons of this curious pair of accidental Siamese twins, together with the hooks and line which constituted their sole domestic tie, now adorn the walls of the fish house of Mr. Van Dyke, on Ocean avenue, opposite North Bath avenue.

Some Scotch Superstitions.

Some of the Scotch superstitions are among the oldest and most widespread in the world. When a baby's hair is cut the floor is carefully swept and the sweepings burned lest any hairs might remain and be picked up by the enemy. Dr. Livingstone mentioned the existence of a similar practice among some African tribes. The same custom obtains in regard to paring the nails of a child under I year old, every scrap of the cuttings being burned. It is considered a very grave offense for any one other than the mother or very near relation to cut the baby's nails.—New York Herald.

THE WIDOW OF NAIN.

LESSON II. SECOND QUARTER, INTER-

Text of the Lesson, Luke vil, 11-18—Commit Verses 14-16—Golden Text, Luke vil, 16—Commentary by the Rev. D. M.

[Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly by per-mission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadel-

11. "And it came to pass the day after, that He went into a city called Nain." He had been at Caperanum, where His soul had been at Caperanum, where His soul had been greatly refreshed by the faith of a Gentlie, at Roman centurion, leading him to say. "I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel," and to look forward to the time of the kingdom when many who thought themselves entitled to the kingdom shall be cast out (see Matt, viii, 10-13). It is not without purpose that this reference to the kingdom is found only in the kingdom gospel (Matthew) and omitted by Luke; but Luke does mention to "great faith" (v. 9), and whether found in Jew or Gentile it is this that gladdens the heart of Jesus and brings forth the "As thou hast believed, so be it done unto thee." Lord, give us such a faith as this.

12. "Now when He came night to the gate of the city, behold, there was a dead man earried out." Only here, in all Scripture, is this city mentioned, but it is forever made memorable by this meeting of the Prince of this city mentioned, but it is forever made memorable by this meeting of the Prince of Life and Light and the Prince of Darkness who has the power of death (Acts iii, 15; Eph. vi, 12; Heb. ii, 14). The Son of God was manifested that He might destroy the works of the devil (I John iii, 8), and when He has gathered from this present world His elect company of associate rulers He will then reign till He hath put all enemies under His feet: the last enemy that shall be destroyed is death I Cor. xv, 25, 26).

"The only son of his mether, and she was a widow; and much people of the city was with her." The little girl whom Jesus raised to life was an only daughter (Luke viii, 42), and. Lazarus seems to have been an only brother., 13. "And when the Lord saw her, He had compassion on her, and said unto her, Weep not." In one company the center of attraction was the Lord of Life and Glory; in the other, this poor, desolate, broken hearted widow. The two now meet, and from the Fountain of Life into the heart of the desolate flow the all powerful words, "Weep not." So He also said in the house of Jairus (Luke ix, 52); and to Mary after the resurrection He said, "Why weepest thou?" (John xx, 15) Yet He Himself wept at the grave of Lazarus and on the mount of olives and in the garden of Gethsemane (John xi, 35; Luke xix, 41) Heb. v, 7). When he weeps it is because of sin either in its present or future results; when He says "Weep not" it is because of what He is able and willing to do. A "Weep not" from a helpless fellow being is often a vain word, and almost seems of times like mockery; but a "Weep not" from one who has power to remove the cause of the weeping is a powerful and welcome word. We may fancy how quickly the tears were dried and all eyes afted on Him. Let us keep our eyes on Him while we wait for the time when right here on this earth, made into a new earth, there shall be no more death, neither sand they that bare him stood still." To hear the words and see the power of God we must stop and be still. It was whe as from sleep (see Matt. viii, 20; xvii, 70, and is used in reference to those who rose from the dead after His resurrection (Matt. xxvii, 52).

15. "And He that was dead sat up and began to speak." Life, and health, and speech from the Prince of Life, all unmerited, all of grace, and all by His word in the power of the Spirit. The words which He speaks are Spirit and Life, and he that hears and believes hath everlasting life, and is passed from death unto life. The hour is coming when all that are in their graves shall hear His voice (the same voice) and shall come forth, some to life and some to condemnation. Blessed are those who now hear and live that they may come forth with the righteous at the beginning of the hour, and not be among those who shall not rise till the end of the hour, or the thousand years (John vi, 63; v, 24-29; Rev. xx, 5). It says that he began to speak; will some one explain why so many who profess to have received life in Christ have nothing to say for Him! Must we conclude that, like Zacharias, they are dumb because of unbelief! (Luke i, 20).

"And He delivered him to his mother." Is there not here a hint, as in the resurrection of families in the resurrection? And while there shall then be neither marrying nor giving in marriage, are we not by these facts, and by I Thess. it, 19, taught to expect in some measure a reunion of those who in families or in service have been united on earth?

10. "And there came a fear on all: and they glorified God, saying, That a great prophet is risen up among us; and, That God hath visited his people." They may have thought of the resurrections through Elijah and Elisha, and possibly have remembered these words: "I will send you Elijah the prophet before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord" (Mal. iv, 5), or some of the promises of visitation for deliverance and restoration, as Isa xxiv, 22, 23; Ezek, xxxviii, 8; Zeph. ii, 7, etc. The two

But among all the beauties there are many horrors in Pompeii that leave lasting impressions. There are casts taken from the molds of ashes that incased the victims of the great catastrophe, showing their writinings and agonies as plainly as though they had just died. Soft Coal a Disinfectant.

The belief that smoke from soft coal may have beneficial sanitary effects is gaining ground. It is claimed that sulphur in the coal when burned becomes highly disinfectant. Further, that creosote and its allied products are thrown off with the fumes of bituminous coal, and that an atmosphere charged with carbonic acid must be freer from germs of disease than an apparently purer air.—New Orleans Picayune. To Make Pulled Bread.

Pulled bread is liked particularly well by English people, we are told. They cat it with cheese. To make pulled bread, take a loaf of freshly baked bread, while it is still warm, pull the inside of it out in pieces the size of your hand and smaller, and put these into the oven and bake them to a delicate brown. When cool they are crisp and thought to be especially good with cheese.—New York Telegram. About the Ear.

Ears vary greatly in form and size, and the peculiarities of shape they as-sume sometimes give an index to the character of the individual. Women have much better shaped ears than men. They are usually much smaller, and lie close to the head. CHARACTERISTICS OF ANIMAL LIFE.

CHARACTERISTICS OF ANIMAL LIFE.

Nature's Cartons Provisions for Protecting Defenseless Animals.

It is perfectly wonderful to notice the phenomenal provisions made by nature for the preservation of the weaker and more helpless animals. In many cases the color of the creature is adapted in a wonderful way to its mode of living and its place of concealment, contributing very materially to its safety. All who live among the green fields, which, by the way, is the way to live properly, know how difficult it is to distinguish the grasshopper from the leaf or blade of vegetation upon which he is at rest, until he betrays himself by moving. Those birds which sing in the hedgerow have feathers upon their backs which harmonize with the color of the leaves about and among which they flit, while the feathers on their breasts about and among which they flit, while the feathers on their breasts borrow the white hue from the clouds above them.

The partridge can hardly be distinguished from the stubble where it makes its nest, while in the more northern countries the winter dress of the hare and ptarmigan is white, like the snow with which the landscape is usually covered, and upon which these animals are seen. Among marine animals the same natural provisions prevail, and go down, however deep, into the water, animal life the same color will be found. The frogs, living in the stagnant pools and muddy ditches by the roadside, are known to vary their color in order to harmonize with the sand or mud in which they live. The little tree frog, on the other hand, is green, and thus is with difficulty distinguished from the tree to which it adheres. Fish, especially those which inhabit fresh water, are so like in color to the weeds and stones among which they lie that it is often very difficult to detect their presence.

One of the most wonderful instances of nature's care in providing for the protection of the more defenseless creatures is found in the apparatus for defense with which the cuttlefish is provided. The very instant its quick eye catches a glimpse of an approaching enemy, knowing by instinct alone—it is absurd to speak of reason in connection with these low forms of animal life—the impossibility of seeking safety by flight, and having no means of defense whatever, it prepares at once to seek safety in concealment. To this end it sinks downward rapidly, throwing out from a vessel with which it is provided, and nature taught it ouse, a stream of fluid with which the blackest paint is light in comparison. This soon colors the water far around, and effectually conceals the animal and at the same time is very repulsive to all forms of animal life feeding upon it; and, as it takes considerable time for this to disperse and the water to clear itself, the enemy is generally baffled. If, however, as is sometimes the case, a reasoning ani

A Rallroad Ghost Story.

Between Palmer and Farris, on the Houston and Texas road, there is a singular hill in the prairie black lands, it is covered with oak and pecan as tall as Kentucky trees. The locality, though a hill, is always wet. The ground is muddy, and the air murky. The station sign problaims the name; the siding is called Ghost Hill. The reason of the name is this: At night, while passing this point, time and again has the whistle called for brakes and the bell rung for imaginary crossings. The train men, after setting the brakes, would be terrified to learn that the engineer had not given A Railroad Ghost Story. ting the brakes, would be terrified to learn that the engineer had not given the signals. More than one crew has incontinently abandoned the service of the company after such experience, not caring to ride over Ghost Hill with the spirit of a fireman killed there many years ago tugging away at bell and whistle.—Texas Cor. Jews Among the Caucasian Peaks.

There are eight peaks loftier than Mont Blane, and fifteen above 15,000 feet. The four highest are Elbruz, Koshtantau, Shkara and Dychtau. It was in the attempt to ascend the last named mountain that the British explorers evidently lost their lives. Mr. Freshfield and the searching party passed through most interesting regions. They came upon small settlements of mountain Jews, who must have been separated from their race at a very early date, and show signs of Persian influence. They passed also through a dense forest to the valley of the Kodor, where local tradition declares that a wild race exists, without arms, clothes or villages.—London Graphic. loward decorating a house or a flat in a day," said a resident of Harlem, "than a squad of decorators will in a week. Women seem to have a special aptitude for this sort of work, and they decorate all sorts of in and out places which a professional artist would not think of touching. The curious point of it is that the apparent absurdities of decoration usually have a very good effect. Most of it is art of the crudest sort, but it is effective,"—New York Sun.

The Egyptian Lotus.

The Egyptian lotus is the sacred flower of Egypt, China, Japan and India. Until lately it was supposed to be a tropical plant, but within a few years it has been found to be perfectly hardy. At Bordentown, N. J., it has been seen growing where the ice would form a foot thick over the plants.

The flower is magnificent, from eight to twelve inches across. The petals are white at their base, and in the center and at the tip a brilliant crimson. The large cluster of pistils and stamens are bright yellow.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

In April, 1864, a New York regiment was in Covington, Ky. A little party of them determined to go over and attend a place of amusement. What took place after the performance is thus described by one of the participants:

We thought it would be a rare treat to put up at a hotel for the night, enjoy a sound sleep on a soft bed, and have a good breakfast before returning to camp in the morning.

To this end we repaired to the hotel, paid a dollar and a half each for our double bedded room—there were four in the party—and then went to the theatre.

We enjoyed the performance, and, after partaking of a good oyster supper, returned to the hotel and retired, anticipating a good night's sleep on the feather beds.

"Come, John!" I exclaimed, "why don't you lie still and go to sleep?" "Why don't you go to sleep?" "Why don't you go to sleep your-self?" was the response.

Then we heard similar questions and exclamations from the other bed, and soon our companions were heard tumbling out and lying down on the floor, declaring that they "couldn't sleep on that bed; it's too soft."

We chaffed each other a good deal about our adventure, but decided rather than pay for beds in the hotel and then of our own accord lie on the floor, we had better go back to the barracks and lie in our bunks.

An Experience with Burglars

An Experience with Burglars.

Ed Pieser, the florist, has a friend who resides up on the south side, and this friend had a peculiar experience not long ago. He went home one evening and his wife began to tell him thrilling stories of a burglary that had been committed in the adjoining house the night before. She expressed fear that their house might be raided, too. Her husband laughed at her fears and when he started upstairs he said to her: "Now, my dear, to show you how foolish you are I will take off all of my jeweiry and leave it here on the dining room table;" whereupon he did so, leaving his watch, cuff buttons, ring and stud in the center of the cloth. Before he retired he pulled from a trunk a big 44 caliber revolver, loaded it carefully, and placed it by the bedside, within easy reach. When he awoke the next morning he happened to think of the gun and he looked for it. It was gone! Hastily jumping from bed he hurried downstairs to the dining room, only to find the side window opened and that all of his jewelry had disappeared. He hated to go back upstairs and tell his wife, but he had to, finally, and she would have laughed at him had it not been for the loss. "The idea of their stealing my gun is what beats me," he said, as he told the story.—Chicago Herald.

The Sound of Light.

One of the most wonderful discoveries in science that have been made is the fact that a beam of light produces sound. A beam of sunlight is thrown through a lens on a glass vessel that contains lampblack, colored silk or worsted, or other substanles. A disk having slits or openings cut in it is made to revolve swiftly in this beam of light, so as to cut it up, thus making alternate flashes of light and shadow. On putting the car to the glass vessel, strange sounds are heard so long as the flashing beam is falling on the vessel.—American Art Journal.

Two Women and a Telegram.

One was perhaps 25, the other a little younger. They were pretty and were stylishly dressed. A carriage stood at the Fourteenth street entrance of Willard's hotel awaiting their pleasure. It could not be supposed that they were in very distressful financial straits.

They sat at a table in the reception room of Willard's, devising, concocting and instituting a telegraphic message to send to some friend. The elder one did the writing and scratching and rewriting, which used up six or seven Western Union blanks. The younger one leaned closely over the scrivener and furnished suggestions at just the right time to make the scrivener tear up blanks.

That is what they wanted to say.

Origin of the Mathematical Signs.

The sign of addition is derived from the initial letter of the word "plus." In making the capital letter it was made more and more carelessly until the top part of the p was placed near the center, hence the plus sign was finally reached.

The sign of subtraction was derived from the word "minus." The word was first contracted to m n s, with a horizontal line above to indicate the contraction, then at last the letters were omitted altogether, leaving the short line —...

Division was formerly indicated by placing the dividend above the horizontal line and the divisor below. In order to save space in printing the dividend was placed to the left and the divisor to the right, with a simple dot in place of each. The radical sign was derived from the initial letter of the word "radix."

The sign of equality was first used in 1557 by a sharp mathematician, who substituted it to avoid repeating "equal to."—New York Commercial Advertiser.

A Tiger Story.

An English officer climbed along the trunk of a tree which slanted over a pond, and from the end of it fired at a tiger. He wounded the beast severely, but not so as to prevent it from climbing into the tree, and walking toward the hunter. To escape he jumped into the pond; the tiger jumped in after him, pulled him to the shore, laid down on him and began munching at the arm which the man had put up to protect his face. Presently the pain of the wound and the loss of blood caused the tiger to leave the sportsman, and retire a little way into the jumple. The hunter had presence of mind to roll gently back into the water, where he was rescued by some men who happened that way.

Here was more difficulty. It would never do to pay for ten words, and send only seven. That would be a reckless and a wicked waste. They proposed many ways to lengthen it, but each time they talked off a new message on their fingers they found they had either too few or too many words.

How the Typewriter Was Invented.

In connection with a friend, Samuel W. Soule, a printer and inventor, C. L. Sholes was engaged in Milwaukee during the winter of 1866 and 1867 in developing a machine for printing the numbers of pages on the leaves of blank books, after the books were bound, and for printing the serial numbers on bank notes. Carlos Glidden, a friend of Sholes with an inventive fancy, took great interest in the paging machine and asked why a similar contrivance could not be made that would write letters and words instead of figures and numbers. The three men worked together upon this idea, but Sholes evolved the main part of the machine. He suggested pivoted types set in a circle. The principal contribution of Mr. Glidden was his suggestion that such a machine ought to be made. In September, 1867, a machine was finished and letters written with it. The invention was far from being a perfect writing machine, but one of the letters, sent to James Dinsmors, of Meadville, Pa., so interested him that he offered to pay all the expenses up to date for a one-fourth interest. His offer was accepted. Soule and Glidden subsequently dropped out, leaving Sholes and Dinsmore sole proprietors.—Kansas City Star. mill property in Maine was $1,262,000 it is now $2,076,665. Next week will be presented in grand stream, "Held by the Enemy," by William Gillette, one of the most successful and popular playwrights of the day, and will be kept on for one week. In the play we have shown to us in vivid, living pictures how right can triumph over wrong; how noble sentiments and heroic deeds can raise us above the level of the commonplace; how to face trials and fear pain; how to escape from the shadows and find peace and pleasure in shadows and find peace and pleasure in the reflected sunshine of contentment and forbearance. mission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadel-phia.]

36. "And one of the Phariseel desired Him that He would eat with him. And He went into the Pharisee's house, and sat down to meat." The incident of this lesson, like that of the last one, is recorded only by Luke, and seems to have occurred at the same place, the city of Nain. The principal intervening events were the sending of messengers to Jesus by John the Baptist, who was in prison; the miracles wrought by Jesus in their pres-ence, and the testimony of Jesus concerning John after the messengers had departed. He also rebuked the people because of their treatment of John and of Himself, saying that John had a devil and that Jesus was a glutton and wine bibber and friend of publi-cans and sinners.

that John had a devil and that Jessis was a glutton and wine bibber and friend of publicans and sinters.

37. "And, beloid, a woman in the city, which was a sinner." We do not know her name. This is the only place where the record is found and her name is not given. The only name given to her is "sinner," and that fits us all (Rom. iii, 23; v, 12). She may have been more openly a sinner than others, and have wandered farther from the paths of viptue, but she was one of those whom Jesus came to save; and in some way she had been convicted of her sinfulness and filled with a spirit of true penithene.

38. "And stood at His feet behind Him weeping," etc. Reclining as they did at table, as she came behind Him, she could easily stand at His feet, and, bending over them, wash them with her tears.

39. "Now when the Pharisee which had hidden Him saw it, he spake within himself." He might as well have said it out, for Jesus knew his thoughts. He knows ours, too (Ps. exxxix, 2; Ezek, xi, 5), and we need constantly to pray that He would cleanse the thoughts of our hearts.

to pray that He would of our hearts,
40. "And Jesus, answering, said unto him, Biraon, I have somewhat to say unto thee."
Our very thoughts need answering, and the Word of God is equal to it. Vain thoughts lodge within us, and was to our time and himbody within the same of the same

Simon Peter, but this is the only mention of this one.

41, 42. "When they had nothing to pay, he frankly forgave them both. Tell me, therefore, which of them will love him most?" In this story of the creditor and two debtors Jesus would teach Simon somewhat of the relations in which he and the woman stood to God. Not that the indebtedness of Simon and the woman was as fifty compared with five lundred, but that was about the way Simon looked at it. He might be willing to acknowledge that he was not as good as he ought to be, but here was a woman whom everybody knew to be a great simer.

43. "Simon answered and said, I suppose that he to whom he forgave most. And He said unto him, Thou hast rightly judged." Any one could see that the one who was conscious of owing five hundred, being freely

43. "Simon answered and said, I suppose that he to whom he forgave most. And He said unto him, Thou hast rightly judged." Any one could see that the one who was conscious of owing five hundred, being freely forgiven, would feel under much greater obligation to the creditor than the one owing only fifty; and thus lismon answered rightly. A deep sense of sin, a consciousness of our great indebtedness to God, is an invaluable blessing. May not the lack of this be the cause of so little manifest love to God on the part of those who profess to be Hist. 44-46. "And he turned to the woman, and said unto Simon, Seest thou this woman?" Simon was no doubt surprised to have the thoughts of his heart revealed. The poor woman is no doubt surprised to have been thoughts of his heart revealed. The poor woman is no doubt surprised to have Jesus turn in compassion to her. To be allowed to cares and anoint His feet was a great joy, but to have Him turn His face to her, and notice her, and commend her, mentioning every loving act before all the people, and placing her in His estimation above Simon himself, surely now her beart was full. What condemnation for Simon; what glory for her. How great the contrast! The host who invited Him did not treat Him with common courtesy, much less with any degree of honor; no welcome, no gladness from Simon. But this poor sinner, broken hearts do because of her sins, ministers to Him with penitential tears and the true oil of gladness from a loving heart. Here is a foreshadowing of a future day when many a self righteous one shall be confounded and many a poor contrite one gloriously rewarded.

47. "Wherefore I say unto thee, Her sins, which are many, are forgiven." Good for the poor woman, but what about Simon and his sins! In his own estimation he had no men worth mentioning, none that needed special pardon, and Jesus came not to call the righteous but sinners to repentance. If Simon could have had a glimpse of his own heart as Jesus saw it, he too would have had a broken heart and have meekly with her sin) is turned away, and thou com-fortest me, for Thou art become my salva-tion" (Isa. xii, 1, 2). Has H4 spoken to you in such words as these, "I write unto you because your sins are forgiven you, for His Name's sake? (I John ii, 12). And has your heart overflowed with love to Him be-cause of His great salvation so freely be-stowed! If not, come closer to him; hear His "Come unto Me," and hearing and com-ing rejoice in His "Not east out" (Matt. xi, '88. John vi 30").

His "Come unto Me, and nearing and coming rejoice in His "Not east out" (Matt. xi, 2s; John vi, 37).

49. "And they that sat at meat with Himbergan to say within themselves, Who is this that forgiveth sins also?" They knew Himnot; they, too, were blind like Simon; there was no forgiveness for them either, although it was within their reach. A reasoning, questioning spirit draws no blessing from Him, but only a broken and contrict and believing spirit, and this they had not. They were well satisfied with themselves. What a mystery this is! Gol manifest in the flesh, healing the sick, raising the dead, fulfilling the prophecies concerning the Messiah, such as Isa. Xxxv. 5, 6, as well as those in reference to His birth and place of birth (Isa. vii, 14; Mic. v. 2), yet they know Him not. The hungry he fills with good things, but the rich he sends empty away (Luke I, 33). Publicans and harlots enter the kingdom before such self righteous Pharisees. God hath choenthey of the sends of

The clouds in glory swept to heaven; The mellow landscape glowed, Reflecting all the light and warmth That from their radiance flowed.

And nevermore, through years to come, Will I behold the skies, Filled with the same bright mountain clouds, That dazzle now mine eyes?

And we may gaze with raptured eyes

Poison in Greenbacks.

I note that these girls never wet their fingers in their mouths as they count the bills. Each has a sponge beside her and she gets her moisture from this. There is great danger of disease in handling bank notes, and no one can tell as to whether the last holder has had the smallpox or the measles. The notes themselves are green and the green comes from arsenic used in coloring. A sponge after a day's use turns black with the arsenic which comes from the bills, and some thin skinned maidens contract sores on the arms and wrists from this counting. The sponges are changed every day, but if the skin is the least scratched and the arsenic of the note happens to get under the flesh a sore is very likely to appear a day or two afterwards.—Washington Letter.

Gasoline for Railway Cars.

The Chicago, Burlington and Quincy road has been experimenting with gasoline with a view-to using it in the lighting of cars. One system which has been found satisfactory is this: A circular tank filled with cotton waste, which is saturated with gasoline. Small pipes lead from the tank to the lamp generators with funnel shaped openings fixed so as to point always to the front end of the coach. The speed of the car forces air and gasoline vapor to the generators. The light is brilliant. It is a question whether its use will be permitted in Iowa under the inspection law, which prohibits the use of gasoline for illuminating purposes.—New Orleans Picayune. Gasoline for Railway Cars.

How Hallstones Are Formed.

The manufacture of hailstones is conducted at a high altitude. When a storm comes on there is a rush of cold air upward which catches falling raindrops and bears them heavenward. Then the drops pass through a cold cloud and get congealed; they become heavy and fall back into the rain cloud, where a coat of water adheres to them. Caught up again, they are carried into the snow, and take on another jacket; and so the process goes on until a large sized stone is formed, which, with its companious, escapes from the current of air and comes tumbling to the ground.—San Francisco Chronicle. MANY THINGS THAT ARE EATEN.

Living Crabs in Calma and Roasted Spiders in New Caledonia.

If you should travel round the world, you would learn to eat your dinner in a good many different ways. In Turkey you would learn to sit on the floor crossed legged, and eat your dinner off a round tray without knives or forks, plates, glasses or mapkins. All the guests eat with their fingers out of the same dish. If you dined with the Arabs you would see no knives or forks, and if your host of fered you a choice bit of meat, you would be expected to open your mouth and let him put it in.

The Arabs use only the right hand in eating, and, what is still more funny, they will pull apart or carve turkeys or fowls with only one land and without a knife. If it is hard to separate, one of the guests will lend his right hand. In Siam you would be treated to ant's eggs; and in Burmah to locusts stuffed and tried.

All young folks would like to eat in Japan, for they serve candies and sweet things very often, and what you don't eat you are expected to take home. At grand feasts guests are expected to bring servants with baskets to take home the leavings. In Abyssinia it is a mark of good breeding to smack the lips while eating; and I'm sure you'll not be surprised to hear that they eat their meat raw. In South America you would eat snakes and lizards; and among our American Indians you would eat snakes and lizards; and among our American Indians you would be treated to grasshoppers. In Otaheite you would eat your dinner alone, from a basket, and if you were in the fashion you would turn your back to everybody while eating. Snails and horseflesh would greet you in France. But the funniest dish you would set, I gues, would be in China, where they serve up little erabs—alive! Just as they sit down to dinner the tiny crabs are put in a dish of vinegar, which makes them very lively. Then they are put in a covered dish and placed on the table, when everyone is ready the cover issnatched off, and instantly the table is covered with scampe who have eaten them say they are delicious.

Some people add caterpillars to their dainties. Would you faney eating reasted ants by the handfuls? They taste like sweetened cream, so travelers say. I never tried them. But really, when you come to think of it, none of those insects, that we consider so horrible and disgusting, look any worse than lobsters and crabs which we eat freely. It is a matter of fashion, like digging up a centipede eighteen inches long, in India, and eating it like a stick of candy, as the children do there, according to Humbert.—Pansy.

Gossip About Orear Wilde.

Oscar Wilde is certainly the most charming conversationalist in all England, and if he is particularly eloquent upon any one subject that one subject is "reading in bed." He says that for years he has been addicted to this fascinating habit; that he reads himself to sleep, and that as soon as he wakes in the morning he reaches for his book. "The habit grows on me. Often I find myself disposed to lie abed all day, reading. I read with amazing rapidity. When I was a boy at school I was looked upon as a prodigy by my associates, because, quite frequently, I would, for a wager, read a three volume novel in half an hour so closely as to be able to give an accurate resume of the plot of the story; by one hour's reading I was enabled to give a fair narrative of the incidental scenes and the most pertinent dialogue."—London Letter to Chicago News. A Queen a Voluntary Slave.

Hester Cora Mitchell, as she is known here, after becoming the slave of ex-Governor Mitchell, is buried in the cemetery in this city. She was a queen of some African tribe, and came to this country voluntarily, bringing with her all the insignia of her royalty—crowns and robes and jewels, etc. She was pleased with this country, and resolved to lay down her robes of royalty and become a slave, as above stated. Every Christmas, until her death, she would appear before the negroes in all the gorgeousness of her queenly paraphernalia. After this exhibition she would retire, lay aside her queenly attire, and go into the kitchen as humbly as any of the other servants of Governor Mitchell had her buried in her regalia.—Milledgeville Chronicle.

Honesty of Women.

"Did you ever know a woman fail to return a borrowed umbrella?" asked a dealer in these articles, addressing a reporter.

"Nobody else ever did," said the dealer, emphatically. "I have been a long time in the business of selling them, and I have made a special study of woman in connection with the borrowed umbrella phase of social ethics. of woman in connection with the bor-rowed umbrella phase of social ethics, and I have yet to learn of a case in which she has abused the confidence reposed in her when she was lent an umbrella to protect herself when she was caught in a sudden shower. One of the choicest relics of the Bohemian club of San Francisco is a little piece of paper—a telegraphic message—framed under glass. It is the response of our genial Autocrat to a greeting sent to him by wire during one of the dinners of the club, which arrived so late in Boston that it found the doctor in bed. He was equal to the occasion, however, and immediately replied as follows:

A method of polishing wood with charcoal, which is much used by French cabinet makers, is described in charcoal, which is much used by French cabinet makers, is described in a Paris technical journal. It is only applicable to things made of carefully selected woods, of a close and compact grain. They are fiest covered with a coat of camphor dissolved in water, and almost immediately afterward with another coat, composed chiefly of sulphate of iron and nut gall. The two compositions, in blending, penetrate the wood and give it an indelible tinge and render it impervious to the attacks of insects. When these two costs are dry, they rub the surface of the wood at first with a very hard brush of couch grass—chien dent—and then with charcoal of substances as light and friable as possible, because if a single hard grain remained in the charcoal this alone would scratch the surface, which they wish to render perfectly smooth. The flat parts are rubbed with natural stick charcoal and the indented portions and crevices with adversal resources. rubbed with natural stick charcoal and the indented portions and crevices with charcoal powder. Alternately with the charcoal the workman also rubs his piece of furniture with flannel soaked in linseed oil and essence of turpentine. These pouncings repeated several times cause the charcoal powder and the oil to penetrate the wood, giving the article of furniture a beautiful color and a perfect polish, which has none of the flaws of ordinary varnish.

Examples of this law of heredity are plentiful among the financial leaders. The Astors and Vanderbilts of this generation have shown themselves well worthy touphold the great monetary dynasties founded by their ancestors, and there is not in either family a spendthrift or an unworthy member, W. W. Astor has done some creditable literary work. Jay Gould's sons are likely to carry out his projects and increase the magnitude of his fortune. Robert Benner's heritage is well cared for by his sons. The Ames family, which started its fortune by making shovels and increased it in Credit Mobilier, has an able member in Oliver Ames, who has twice been governor of Masachusetts. "Old Hutch's" son in Chicago is at 30 the president of a bank and director of a score of financial institutions. James score of financial institutions. James L. Why the Students Smiled.

A famous college president, a clergyman, was addressing the students in the chapel at the beginning of the college year. "It is," he said in conclusion, "a matter of congratulation to all the friends of the college that this year opens with the largest freshman class in its history." And then, without any paase, he turned to the Scripture lesson for the day, the third Psalm, and began reading in a voice of thunder:

"Lord, how are they increased that trouble me."

This, however, was hardly more unfortunate than the choice of the hymn:
"Return, ye ransomed sinners, home," as the closing selection of a certain American board meeting.—Syracuse

Forced To Leave Home

FULFILL YOUR PROMISES

There is no lesson the young business man needs to learn more thoroughly than the value of good reputation and good credit. These cannot be won and kept by false pretenses of any kind, but must be earned by a strict observance of contracts, agreements and prohiscs. The man whose word is "as good as his bond" is the man who has inspired confidence in himself by always doing that which he has promised to do. He is also, as a 14 le, cautious about entering into obligations, chary about making promises that he may not be able to fulfill. If too prodigal in the latter respect one cannot hope to keep faith at all times.

A man who is or intends to be honest sometimes loses credit and reputation simply because he is too hopeful. Counting with too great confidence on uncertainties, he makes promises that he cannot fulfill because of the failure of the event on which they were predicted. He voluntarily fixes the date for the payment of a debt, and finds too late something has gone wrong, so that he cannot meet his obligation. Such an accident may happen any man. Upon the way in which he meets the unexpected trouble depends how his reputation shall stand afterwards. If he cannot do cither he should go as soon as possible to his creditor and secure an extension by frankly telling him the state of affairs, thus renewing instead of breaking his promise. The one essential thing to do is to keep good faith, or come as near to it as possible. The worst possible course is to let time run on until his creditor begins to press him on an obligation long overdue. It is too late then for explanations or renewals. His credit is gone, his reputation is broken down. His after promises are distrusted, though they may be gradually built up, for he who keeps his word at all times becomes respected and is trusted. The young man cannot learn too early in life his responsibility to himself and others. He is to make his reputation by what he says and does, and at the outset should have a high regard for truth, which carries with it honesty an

The question came from a shabby genteel young man who dropped in on a prominent costumer of Detroit.

"What do you want to use it for, sir?" queried the dealer, blandly.

"Party."

"Dancing party?"

"Yes, sir."

"For one night $3. That is the price of a full suit—trousers, coat and vest. Without the trousers I will knock off $1. Do you want a suit now, sir?"

"Want it next week."

"Well, that's lucky. All orders for this week are gone."

"Does anything go with the suit?" queried the young man, softly.

"In what way?"

"Shoes, collar, shirt, necktie?"

"No, sir."

"Can you furnish the whole complete?"

"For double the price, yes, sir.

"Well, rather," said the dealer, smiling, "Thirty suits let out for that same affair already. His order makes thirty-one."—Detroit Free Press.

Horseshoeing in Holland.

Horseshoeing in Holland.

The method of shoeing horses in Holland is a novel one. The animal is driven into a stout frame cage; the three feet on the ground are hobbled so that no kicking can be indulged in, then the foot that is to be shod is lifted to the desired position and lashed fast to a stout cross bar so that the smith can work at it from all sides, as though it was held in a vise on a work bench. These docile horses submit to bging so bound, but an American or English horse would in most cases resist until he was ruined if so treated. The cost of an entire set of new shoes is three guilders, or $1.20. American nails were used, although the shoes were of local manufacture.—Detroit News.

Women and Criminals.

Let us hope that the large respect hown by the Massachusetts Legislashown by the Massachuseits Legisla-ture for the rights of male voters may not be found wanting when the bill for municipal suffrage for women comes up. Up to this year, a man lost his vote for one year by a change of residence. But the present Legislature has made a change of residence no barrier to a man's right to vote. He may move from one town to another, and may from one town to another, and may have been only a short time a resident.

but he can vote all the same.

Much discussion has also been had and interest expressed to find a way by which illiterate voters may know how to mark their ballots under the Australian ballot system. Let us hope that this interest in the protection of person-al rights will be shown again when the case of such women as Mrs. Julia Ward Howe and Mrs. Mary A. Livermore asking for municipal suffrage comes up. They will need no assis-tance in marking their votes. Not only have the rights of voters who change their residence and of the illiterate voters been cared for, but men "gality of infamous crimes" now have their right to vote secured. It had been proposed that men guilty of infamous crimes should be disfranchised for ten years. But, after much discussion, the bill to disfranchise such men was lost.

LESSON IV. SECOND QUARTER, IN-

Text of the Lesson, Luke viii, 4-15—Commit Verses 12-15—Golden Text, Luke viii, 18-Commentary by the Rev. D. M.

Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly by permission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadel phila.)

According to the first three verses of this chapter, after bringing joy and peace to the poor women in Simon's house, He went through all the cities and villages showing the glad tidings of the kingdom of God, the kingdom foretold by all the prophets, when the Lord shall again choose derusalem, comfort Zion and restore Israel, never to be plucked up or scattered again (Zech. i, 17; ii, 10-12; Jer. xiv., 0, 7; that through them He may establish His Messianic kingdom in all the world. He was accompanied by the twelve and certain women whom He had healed and who now ministered unto Him. Returning, probably, to Capernaum, He leaded one possessed with a blind and dumb demon. This drew forth from the Pharisees the accusation that He was possessed by the divil, and thus did these mighty works, Jesus in reply warned them of the sin that can meer be forgiven, whether committed in this age or the age to come. He also foretold His death and resurrection and pointed them to a coming judgment. They receive not His teaching, but determine to kill Him (Matt. xii).

4. "And when much people were gathered many nightly, not many noble are ed" (I Cor. I, 26).

8, "A sower went out to sow his seed," and sower went out to sow his seed," "Hethat hath ears to hear, let him hear." I a simple story of what may have been mg place before the Saviour's eyes at that nent. On the hillside a farmer may have a neturally sowing his seed, some falling the beaten path, some on thin soil beneath the was a great rock; some where the ras had already procecupied the ground; some on good ground. The Saviour ansates the harvest, and speaks of that chiefle on the good ground as the only ion necomplishing anything. He was in habit of using the most familiar things a which to illustrate His teaching.
"And His disciples asked Him, saying, at might this parable be!" The Holy it interprets spiritual things to spiritual (Cor. ii, 13, R. V., margin), and these had not yet received the Holy Spirit in fullness, therefore they understood not parable.

"And He said Usta you it is given to men had not yet received the Holy Spirit in His fullness, therefore they understood not this parable.

10. "And He said, Unto you it is given to know the mysteries of the kingdom of God: but to others in parables," By comparing Matt. siil, 36; Mark iv, 10, we see that Jesus sent the multitudes away and went into the house, and that then He gave the explanation of this parable. That He was in the house when He interpreted the parable appears also from verses 19 and 20 of this chapter. It has been said that a parable is somewhat like a nut which keeps the kernel for the diligent, but from the indolent. Because they would not trouble themselves to see or hear He therefore so speaks that the unbelieving and indifferent may not see nor hear.

11. "Now the parable is this: The seed is the World of God." Mark says: "The sower soweth the word." The business of every Curistian in this whole ago is to be a vessel in the hand of the great Sower with which He may scatter the recd of the word.

12. "Those by the way side are they that hear; then comet the devil." We have now four kinds of soil on which the word falls and will fall till the kingdom comes. There is the hard beaten heart of the so called gospel hardened. He has gone to church all his life, perhaps is seldom absent on Sunday morning, but he is too weary in body to hear with profit, or, if not, the business of the week so so crowds in upon him that while apparently he is listening to the serion he is in his mind going over yesterlay's business transactions or anticipating those of to-morrow.

13. "They on the rock are they which, when they hear, receive the word with joy; and these have no root." Here is mother class of churchagers, for observe that each kind of soil represents those who hear, so that this they hear, receive the word with joy; and these have no root." Here is another class of churchgoers, for observe that each kind of soil represents those who hear, so that this parable does not touch those who have never heard the gospel. It shall be far more tolerable for them (Lule xii, 47, 48) in that day. This is a hearer who pays attention, and actually enjoys the public worship, or to talk of the things of God, when it does not cost much—that is when the weather is fine and there are no difficulties in the way, no one opposing. Such may probably nake a profession of faith in Christ, and for a time give joyful testimony, but as soon as there is anything to be endured for the word's sake (Mark iv, 17) immediately they are offended and fall away. It was not a saving faith, not an acceptance of Jesus to suffer with Him cheerfully in view of the reigning bye and bye, but only the receiving of some gladsone truth about Him. These, like the other, give us no solid encouragement.

reiving of some gladsome truth about Him. These, like the other, give us no solid encouragement.

14. "And that which fell among thorns are they which, when they have heard, go forth and are choked." These hearers may possibly be saved; the seed has taken root well, and there is quite a growth, but the thing lacking here is fruit, ripe fruit, that which glorifies, God. But can any one be saved who does not bear fruit, and who allows cares, riches, pleasures and lusts of other things to choke the world. We must stand on the worl of God, even though it may seem to some a dangerous place. I Cor. iii, 11-15, and v. 3-5, clearly indicate that there is the possibility of a salvation as by fire, an escaping as with the skin of one's teeth (Job. xix, 20). But let no one in the least degree take advantage of such a possibility, for such declarations as "I shall be satisfied if I just get in" indicate sad ignorance of the love and purpose of God, and perhaps the necessity of being born anew.

15. "But that on the good ground are they, which in an honest and good heart, having heard the word, keep it, and bring forth fruit with patience." Matthew and Mark and "some thirty, some sixty, and some an inundred fold." Thank God for such hearers. Even a few like these are an inspiration to my pastor, and what a comfort they must be to the Lord Jesus and to the Holy Spirit. Read in reference to themsuch words as Luke vi, 22, 23; xix, 16-19; xxii, 29, 29; II Pet 1, 5-11; II John vili, etc. The difference between those and the others is that these have truly accepted Jesus (not simply be truth about Him) and have firmly believed the truths concerning the kingdom and the glory to be revealed at His appearing. They are, therefore, wearned from present things, are not seeking to convert this world in this dispensation, but, believing this parable, are not discouraged if their labor seems largely in vain; content to have it turn out as He said for the present, sure that in His time and way the kingdom will come.

A Wedding in a Cellar.

One of the funniest runaway matchess—perhaps in this case, it might be better to describe it as a stay at home match—is one that took place near the Iron mountain. The suitor was so objectionable to the parents that they actually locked the young lady in a cellar—at a short distance from the house—which fortunately had some small barred windows, with the ground hollowed out around them to give light.

The lover, being a fellow of wit as well as spirit, secured the services of a preacher, and standing outside the cellar, the necessary responses were, made and the pair married, she within, he without. When all formalities were got through, he walked boldly in the front door and demanded his wife. He was in his right, so the girl had to be given up to him.—New York Journal. A Wedding in a Cellar.

The Brain and the Head.

Dr. Starr, of London, says it is impossible to draw any conclusion from the size or shape of the head as to the extent or surface of the brain, and so extent or surface of the brain, and so as to the mental capacity. It is absurd to judge of the brain surface by either the size of the head or the extent of the superficial irregular surface which is covered by the skull, without taking into consideration the number of folds or the depth of the creases. "For a little brain with many deep folds may really, when spread out, have a larger surface than a large brain with few shallow folds."—Exchange.

A Dog's Debut in "Fauntierey."

H. S. Hyde's fine mastiff will probably never forget his debut on the stage in "Lattle Lord Fauntierey." The first ableau culminated in the attempt of doggy to carry Fauntierey off the stage; in the second the animal made a precipitous exit, but in the third he had to stay, for he was secured to the table leg, upon which was an oil lamp. This lamp had an equilibrium to maintain, and Mr. Hyde's coachman was wrapped up in a rug under the table to assist in keeping the dog actor within bounds.—Springfield Republican.

On the shores of Long Island sound here are found the most delicious long clams in the world. Some of them weigh sixteen and eighteeen ounces each, and they are only to be obtained during a course of very low tides. These clams never find their way to market, not enough being caught to supply the home demand. They retail at from five to ten cents apiece. One peck during a tide is considered a big catch, and only a few veteran fisherman know just where to find them.

A Novel Rat Trap.

A Portland family caught two rats in a novel trap the other day. They had long been puzzled to know how the rodents got into the room and found out when they discovered two roasted rats in the stoves, having started the fire with the dampers closed, thus shutting the unwelcome visitors from their regular route, via stove, stovepipe, chimney flue, etc.—Lewiston Journal.

The Awful Revenge Which a New York Woman Inflicted Upon Her Enemy.
Two fashionably attired women entered an elevated train and began talking about a third person, who was evidently rather obnoxious to them both. The conversation, which was conducted in tones loud enough to be heard some distance away, discovered a species of revenge which no one but a woman could think of, much less put into practice.

I knew she would, because, of course, she never owned anything half so nice. I knew then that my moment of revenge was at hand. I pretended that I didn't care very much for the portieres, except because they were a present, and I asked her if she would take care of them until I needed them, which I probably never should. At first, she wouldn't listen to such a proposition, although I saw she was just tickled to death with the idea, but when I convinced her that she would be doing me the greatest favor in the world she consented.

"They were hung in her drawing room, and were as pretty a pair as the city could boast. All her friends from far and near were invited to see them, and everybody went into raptures over them. I saw my pians were working famously, but I waited and bided my time, knowing well that I should be fully repaid for my patience. After a while, from hearing the portieres praised by every tongue, she began fairly to idolize them. Even her love for her children began to wane, and she would sit for hours in mute admiration of the swaying folds. My time for action had come. It was awfully cruel, I know, but I had intended to do it all along, so my conscience didn't trouble me very much at the critical moment.

"I sent my servants to take the portieres away from her. She never said a word to me when we met, but I shall never forget the look of reproach in her eyes until my dying day. That's a month ago, and she has been fretting so much over her loss that she has become a perfect fright."—New York Evening Sun.

Why Flowers Steep.

Why Flowers Sleep.

That flowers sleep is evident to the most casual observer. The daisy opens at sunrise and closes at sunset, hence its name—"day's eye." The morning glory opens with the day, but never lives to see another sunrise. The "John-go-to-bed-at-noon" awakes at 4 o'clock in the morning, but closes its eyes during the middle of the day; the dandelion is in full bloom only during strong light. This habit of some flowers is certainly very curious, and furnishes one of the many instances which prove the singular adaptability of everything in nature. The reason is found in the method by which this class of flowers is fertilized. It is obvious that flowers fertilized by night flying insects would derive no advantage by being open during the day; and, on the other hand, that those which are fertilized by bees would gain nothing by remaining open at night. Why may we not suppose, then, that the closing of flowers may have reference to the habits of insects! In support of this theory we observe that wind fertilized flowers never sleep.—St. Louis Republic.

Smoking on the Street.

Cigars were never made to be smoked on the street cars or on the broad boulevards of a city when a gentleman is with a lady. Yet it is a common occurrence to see a man walking with a well dressed woman and putfling smoke from the weed into the faces of other pedestrians. After dinner and in the house is the proper time and place to smoke and really enjoy a good cigar. A gentleman of this city, who had been in the habit of buying expensive cigars and smoking them in the open air, discovered that he did not appreciate them so much as he did the post prandial smoke. He turned over a new leaf and bought a quantity of cheap cigars to smoke while in the street, and saved his good and expensive brand for home consumption. According to his experience there is no appreciable difference in the street between a three-for-five-cent cigar and one of three-for-adollar.—Washington Post. Smoking on the Street.

Love of Life.

A recent writer says that persons who earnestly desire to live can keep a mortal disease at bay much longer than those who are comparatively indifferent to their fate. A resolute determination not to succumb is, as every army surgeon knows, the salvation of many a wounded soldier, who without it would assuredly die.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

HOW GEN. GRANT POPPED.

He Was Liding at Night Through Med and Bain While Home on a Furlough. A very striking incident in the life of Gen. Grant was mentioned by an intimate friend. It related to the delicate subject of how the general popped the question. Those who knew Gen. Grant intimately can imagine how he could storm a rampart, charge a battery of artillery or lead a forlorn hope in battle easier than he could ask for the hand of the woman he loved.

The occasion when the young lieutenant in the army and Julia Dent plighted their troth was not one of those ideal moonlight nights, nor were the stars twinkling over lovers' sighs, but on a dark, stormy night in the woods of Missouri. The lieutenant was visiting his army comrade and former classmate, Fred Dent.

He had driven into town in a buggy with his comrade's sister. The young people were on their way home. The rain had fallen in torrents and the roads were ankle deep with mud. The lightning flashed and the thunder pealed out of the blackness of night which followed. A swollen stream and a frail bridge stood in their way. As they reached the spots audden flash of electric light revealed the terrors of the flood and the dangers of the bridge. In an instant, availing himself of this moment of light, the brave young officer urged the good steed upon the quivering floorway. A dreadful burst of thunder shook the very foundations of the earth. The young maiden, who had thus far bravely faced the terrors of the situation, stunned by the tremendous crash, grasped the unmoved licatenant by her side with affrighted force.

The bridge now began to yield to the undermining action of the raging torrent. As it seemed to sink away the maid exclaimed in her fears: "Oh, we are lost." "No, Julia," came a tender reply from the heart full of emotion which beat in that brave young breast. "Nothing shall happen to you. I shall take care of you."

Another flash in timely succession revealed the terribe situation, but one judicious stimulation of the powerful steed brought the lieutenant and his hear

William of Orange Saved by His Dog

William of Orange Saved by Ilis Dog.

On the night of the 11th and 12th of September, 1572, a chosen band of 600 Spaniards made an attack within the lines of the Dutch army. The sentinels were cut down, the whole army surprised and for a moment powerless. The Prince of Orange and his guards were in profound sleep; but a small spaniel dog, who always passed the night upon his bed, was a most faithful sentinel. The creature sprang forward, barking at the sound of hostile footsteps and scratching his master's face with his paws.

There was but just time for the prince to mount a horse that was ready saddled, and to effect his escape through the darkness, before his enemies sprang into his tent. His servants were cut down, his master of the horse and two of his secretaries, who gained their saddleds a moment later, all lost their lives, and but for a little dog's watchfulness, William of Orange, upon whose shoulders the whole weight of his country's fortune depended, would have been led within a week to an ignominious death. The prince ever afterward kept a spaniel in his bed chamber.—Motley's Dutch Republic.

Age of the Species.

Although there is some relation betweed size and longevity, the duration of the period of growth and length of life being, speaking generally, longest in the largest animals, there is no fixed relation between the two. The largest organisms live the longest, some trees reaching an age of 6,000 years, and some animals, as whales, several centuries. And, after the maturity is reached, larger animals require longer time to secure the preservation of the species. The explanation of this, as pointed out by both Leuckhart and Herbert Spencer, is that "the absorbing surface of an animal only increases as the square of its length, while its size increases as the cube, and it therefore follows that the longer an animal becomes the greater will be the difficulty experienced in assimilating any nourishment over and above that which it requires for its own needs, and therefore the more slowly will it reproduce itself.—Longman's.

The Wind Eliows to Meet a Storm. When a storm is advancing, the wind blows to meet it. Thus a wind blowing from the east or southeast indicates the approach of a storm from the west. When the storm center has passed, however, the wind changes and follows the storm. If a person has a good barometer and a wind gage, he can tell pretty correctly when a storm is coming. Without the instruments the clouds may be watched, and when seen to be moving rapidly from the southeast, and there are indications of the presence of much moisture in the air, a storm is not far away,—Montreal Star. treal Star.

'Clergy with "Beggarly Stipends." The archbishop of Canterbury, with £15,000 a year; the bishop of London, with £10,000 a year; the bishop of London, with £10,000 a year, and other extravagantly overpaid Anglican prelates must shudder when they hear of the beggarly stipends of the Scottish Episcopal clergy, the incomes of several of those in the diocese of Aberdeen ranging from £21 a year to £85, while in a neighboring diocese they are bein a neighboring diocese they are be tween £30 and £97.—London Truth.

A Dog in the Organ Loft.

Park Avenue Presbyterian church was the scene of an unusual musical event on Sunday evening.

The innocent cause of the disturbance was a little Scotch terrier belonging to the family of a young lady who nets as the church organist. He had slyly contrived to follow his young mistress, unknown to her, from home to the organ loft, and, after securely ensconeing himself in a comfortable corner, waited patiently for the evening service. The organist was very much surprised, shortly after commercing the voluntary, to hear a succession of sepulchral groans from the corner. On investigation, she was completely taken aback on discovering the little Scotchy, which jumped and frisked about, exhibiting its great delight. It was evident the canine soul was thrilled with joy, but nevertheless it was out of the question for him to remain a member of the choir, and he was promptly ejected.

This incident over, the choir proceeded to sing an anthem, but they had not sung through the first verse when from the outside was heard the unmistakable howling of the undanted terrier. It had returned to the attack and seemed bent on joining in the singing by hook or crook. This caused a suspension of music by the choir, as between the mild panic and laughter created by the renewed at tempts of the faithful animal it was impossible to go on. The musical prodigy was again ingloriously ejected, this time with more force than affection, and again the service proceeded.

But it was evident that the canine meant to stay on till the termination.

But it was evident that the canin

Embalming Without Mutilation.

By a new invention some of the painful features of the disposition of the dead in those cases where delay in burial or cremation is necessary is avoided, and partial dissection is dispensed with. This in ention consists in a flexible air tight envelope to enclose the body, which is placed on a suitable truck for supporting it. The sack, after the insertion of the remains, is made air tight by means of set screws and clamps at one end, while at the other end is a nozzle connected with an air pump. After the air has been partially exhausted the nozzle is connected to a vessel which contains compressed embalming vapor. The sack is also provided with hoops to keep it distended, and a face mask for the protection of the features. The gas may be made commercially, or manufactured by the undertaker at his place of business, and kept in a suitable gas holder on board ship, or conveyed to the place where the body is. The pressure of the gas causes it to permeate through the tissues of the body, and this process is much facilitated by the previous exhaustion of the air. When used at sea the embalming sack serves as a casket for containing the body until the ship arrives at port.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

The Richest People on Earth.

The Osages are the richest people in the world. There are only about 1,600 on the tribe and they own 1,500,000 acres of land in the territory, on which they have large berds of cattle. Then they lease their large to cattlemen and derive an income of $20,000 per annum, which is used in running their government. But the greater part of their wealth is in cold cash in the vaults of the treasury department. The original grant to the tribe was 8,000,000 acres of land in Southern Kamas. By the treaty of 1866 they were paid $1.25 per acre for this land, and were also given their present reservation. Of the amount of the purchase price, about $8,000,000 is now placed to the credit of the tribe, not one cent of which they can touch, but are paid interest at the rate of 5 per cent. For some reason they have not been receiving the full amount of the interest, and there has accumulated almost $1,000,000, drawing no interest and remaining idle.—Kansas City Star. The laziest man in Scotland is said to have been the joiner who, after repeated dismissals from his employment by his master, was at length foreibly haid in a coffin by his shopmates and carried off for burial by way of a joke. On the way they met a farmer, who asked if the man was dead.

"No," was the reply, "but we intend to bury him; he is that lazy that he should not be allowed to live."

At the farmer's request they took off the lid, when the farmer asked the lazy one if he thought he could eat two or three boiled taties.

duces unsightly lumps or swellings; which causes painful running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; which developes ulcers in the eyes, cars, or nose, often causing blindness or deafness; which is the origin of pinnjes, cancerous growths, or the many other manifestations usually ascribed to "humors;" which, fastening upon the lungs, causes consumption and death. Being the most ancient, it is the most general of all diseases or affections, for very few persons are entirely free from it.

"My daughter Mary was afflicted with scrofulous sore neck from the time she was 22-months old till she became six years of age. Lumps formed in her neck, and one of them after growing to the size of a pigeon's egg, became a running sore for over three years. We gave her Hood's Sarsaparilla, when the lump and all indications of scrofula entirely disappeared, and now she scems to be a healthy child." J. S. Carlier, Nauright, N. J.

Owing to the appeal last year in behalf of the Johnstom sufferers, the contributions for the season of 1859 were somewhat less than usual. It is earnestly hoped that the donations for the present year may be larger in order to meet the increasing demands of this constantly growing charity.

Subscriptions for the season of 1890 are now being received, and (marked "For the Country Weck") should be sent to Win. II. Baldwin, President Boston Young Men's Christian Union, 18 Boylston street, Boston.

The Union feeling that the future prosperity of our Country depends upon the right training of the children, are trying to do what they can to interest and instruct them in temperance principles. Boston Record: Pastor Fielden of Winchester's Baptist church is going back to old time rigors in his doctrinal discipline. It is not many weeks since he advised the men of his flock from the pulpit not to wear tiles or carry canes to church, and added that plain bonnets and very little or no jewelry was altogether the best raiment in which a ''perfesser'' should appear at church. It seems a shame to deny pretty girls and their mothers spring bonnets, when the flowers of the field are all arraying themselves in the brightest colors. At the annual parish meeting Monday afternoon S. Sewall was chosen Parish Clerk and Treasurer; T. I. Reed and B. Carter, Parish Committee. Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Sewall and Mr. and Mrs. T. I. 56-Commit Verses 54-56-Golden Text, Luke viii, 50-Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

After the parables spoken by the Lashore and the further parables spoken in the house, He entered into a boat with His disciples to cross the sea, and as they sailed He fell asleep. But a great storm arising, they awoke Him; He arose and rebuked the wind and the sea, and there was a great calm, so that the disciples marveled, saying; "What manner of man is this?" Having crossed the sea, He healed the man of Gadara, who was possessed with a legion of evil spirits, and sent him home to his friends a well man, to tell the great things the Lord had done for him, Jesus then returned to His own city, Capernaum (Matt. ix, I), and the people gladly received Him, for they were all waiting for Him. Contrast verses $7$ and 40 of this chapter, and see the Gadarenes driving Him out and the people of Capernaum receiving Him. What has your heart for him! Rejection, or a hearty wore heart for him! Rejection, or a hearty wore heart for him! Rejection, or After the parables spoken by the trashore ter, and see the Gadarenes driving Him out and the people of Capernaum receiving Him. What has your heart for him? Rejection, or a hearty welcome?

41. "And, behold, there came a man named Jairus, and he was a ruler of the synagogne." Matthew says that Jesus was sitting at meat in the house, in the midst of His disciples and many publicans and sinners, and to the fault finding Plarisees. He said that He came to call sinners and not righteous ones such as they considered themselves to be. The disciples of John also come with a question concerning fasting, and Jesus in reply speaks of Himself as the Bridgeroom, and of the impossibility of combining the old and the new. "And he fell down at Jesus feet, and besonght Him that He would come into his couse." He cares not what any one may hink or say, one great need fills his soul, and aere is one who can satisfy it; so he stops not to think of his dignity as a ruler, nor of the eriticisms that may be passed upon him, but only of this Great Physician whom he seeks. In this gospel we find four different people at Jesus' feet (vil, 28; viii, 38, 41; x, 39, and they are four very different kinds of people, but the same Jesus meets the need of each, 42. "For he had one only daughter, about xwelve years of age, and she lay a dying." Here is the cause of his eageness, naxiety and self forgetfulness; another fills his heart, and she is very dear to him, for she is his daughter, his only daughter, and she is sick, very sick, dying, perhaps dend by this time. 49. "While He yet spake, there cometh one from the ruler of the synagogue's house." On the way not only do the crowd press and throng Him, but there mingles with them another whole hearted seeker; only a poor woman, a sufferer for twelve years, who has spent all her living upon physicians but without avail. Quite a contrast in social position to flee ruler, but they are both alike in this, that each is a whole hearted seeker because of a keenly realized need and sense of utter help-lessness, and each has faith in Him.

"He suffered no man to go in, save "He suffered no man to go in, save r, and James, and John, and the father the mother of the maiden." All is now to the third the mother of the maiden. All is now to the third the suffered suffered to the suffered suffered to the disciples being allowed to enter. "He said, Weep not; she is not dead, elepeth." This is as He sees it, and He vs, for He sees all things in their true 52. "He said, Weep not; she is not dead, but sleepeth." This is as He sees it, and He knows, for He sees all things in their true light. The little tired body sleeps, the spirit has flet, but He knows how to awake it. He said concerning Lazarus, "Our friend Lazarus sleepeth;" but later He said plainly, "Lazarus is dead" (John xi, 11-14). Shere is our proof that Jesus calls death a sleep. 53. "And they laughed Him to scorn, knowing that she was dead." What their eyes saw you couldn't make them disbolieve; and like many today, what their eyes couldn't see or their blinded reasons understand you couldn't make them believe. Seeing is believing was their motto. The follower of Jesus says, "Believing is seeing." We take to our hearts His words to Thomas. 54. "He took her by the hand, and called, saying, Maid, arise." Mark gives the two words which He actually uttered, "Tallitus created the world is in them. Where the word of a king is there is power (Eed, viii, 4), and here is a word from the King of Kings in the power of the on mipotent Spirit of God. "Young man, arise;" "Maid, arise," "Lazarus, come forth." Let any ordinary mortal stand by these dead people and shout such words in the form or man, a real man but more than man, quietly He utters the word, but mark the result.

55. "And her spirit came again, and she is in her mother's arms alive and well. Not weak and sickly looking as one arising from a sick bed, but perfectly whole as one in good health; and with an appetite for food, for He a sick bed, but perfectly whole as one in good health; and with an appetite for food, for He rommanded to give her something to eat. At the same word shall all who are in their graves come forth, ether among the Blessed and Holy who take part in the First Resurrection, or among the rost of the dead who live not again till the thousand years are finished (Rev. xx, 5, 6). What reunions never to be broken, what joy, what blessing unalloyed when we shall sit down with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob in the Kingdom of God, to eat and drink with Hum, at His table, in His Kingdom (Matt. viii, 11; Luke xxii, 39).

50. "And her parents were astonished: but He charged them that they should tell no man what was done." Yet Matthew says that "the fame hereof went abroad into all that land." He did nothing secretly; there were always witnesses cought to all He said and did, but for wise reasons He often told these witnesses to say nothing about this or that particular event. He came as Israel's Christ, and when the rulers of the nation refused to receive Him, it was only meet that many of His mighty acts should be hidden from these rulers who only sought to slay Him.

Economy of Heat and Fuel.

Recognizing the fact that scarcely more than 15 per cent, of the theoretical power of coal used underordinary boilers is recovered in the steam engine, and that quite 85 goes to waste in the shape of smoke and gas and escaping heat, a big manufacturing firm are training their firemen to use fuel in the most advantageous way, spreading a thin layer when it is needed, and avoiding choking and smothering, by which fires are cooled rather than intensified, and fuel grievously wasted. The firm have arranged to reward the man who saves the most fuel, and supply the place of those who shovel recklessly.—New York Commercial Advertiser. Economy of Heat and Fuel.

She did not stop until she reached the top, where she perched herself and there kept up a dismal howl all night because she was afraid to come down again. But that cat wasn't half so big a fool as one I had once. Mine used to climb on the base of my kitchen range and set there and howl because the stove was hot and burned her feet. So far as the legs are concerned, the tailors declare that very few men have perfectly formed legs. Not only is one leg apt to be longer than the other, but they are very apt, indeed, to be bowed. If the case is not a bad one the tailor can cut the trousers so that the outer seam of the garment bolow the knees will hang perfectly straight and the fullness of the trousers will come on the inside of the leg. Men have been known to have one leg bowed and the other straight. Knock kneed men are the most difficult to fit.—Philadelphia Times.

A Money Lender.

I recall the money lender of our town—a close fisted, overbearing fellow—who was one of the most enthusiastic church members in the place. On one occasion he is said to have prayed in meeting for more interest in leaven. The profanest man in town overheard him and offered up his prayer. It was: "Don't give him more interest in heaven, O Lord, for he's getting 5 per cent, a month here." As I remember it the popular feeling was with the profane man.—Exchange.

A Clever Irishman.

Mr. Pyne, the distinguished Irishman, is said to wear a watch upon the face of which is engraved the motto, "Pay no Rent." When a tenant comes to him complaining about some act of his landlord, and asking for advice, Mr. Pyne says: "I cannot give you advice on that subject, because Mr. Balfour says that it would be illegal, but I can tell you the time of day." Then he pulls out his watch and shows it to the tenant.—New York Sun.

A RACE DOWN A TRAMWAY.

shooting Down a Mountain Road Behind a Pleeing Cow and a Weak Beaks.

"Did I ever have a lively ride? It think I am safe in saying yes, although I cannot say that I traveled at the rate of sixty or seventy miles, perhaps not more than forty. But we went fast enough, and few of us in the car were sure enough of being alive the next day to put off thinking of those things that a man wil, dwell on when he believes his life in danger. I know that the people on the car were glad when it stopped, although we were out of all danger when it did stop.

"If you ever travel to Alta, a mining camp high in the Wahsatch mountains, in Utah territory, you will make part of the trip on a horse tramway, for no railroad could climb the mountains to the head of Lattle Cottomwood canyon, where Alta sits up among the clouds. The tramway is extremely narrow and hangs by ledges and crags and peaks, as it seems, winding its way till you are at the very lead of the canyon. From first to last you are in a snowshed, the roof of which inclines at an angle with the mountain's side, and over this snow-shed and down its steep pitched roof flash snow sides and masses of ice, which leap far out when they leave the sided and go diving to the bottom of the canyon, down so far below that when you look at a man following the trail down there on his broncho he looks like a doll on the back of a small dog. In the sides of the shed there are little square holes which let in light enough to enable you to see the string of mules stretched out before you in single line tugging away at your narrow car.

"But while mules pull your light car on the upward trip you come down with a rush. The mules are sent down the cannon to Wahsatch station. When you are nicely tucked in the car the man sitting in the front seat gently increased and the car is going. The Mysterious Music of Pascagoula. It was late one evening in September, 1875, that I first heard the mysterious music of Pascagoula. An old fisherman called me from the house where I then was, to come down on the river bank and "hear the spirits singing under the water." Full of eager curiosity, I readily obeyed the summons, and, if what I heard cannot properly be called music, it was certainly mysterious. From out of the waters of the river, apparently some forty feet from its shelving bank, rose a roaring murmuring sound, which waters of the river, apparently some forty feet from its shelving bank, rose a roaring murnuring sound, which gradually increased in strength and volume until it reached its height, when it slowly descended.

It never advanced or receded, but seemed always in the same spot; and, though I remained there some time, it never ceased, but continued to rise and fall in the manner that I have indicated above. The reader may obtain a better idea of the music if he will place his ear against a telegraph pole, the timber of which, acting as a sounding board for the wires that are played upon by the wind, gives forth a strange, tremulous sound, that is an exact counterpart of the "music of Pascagoula"—with this difference, however, that whereas the music of the wires is very wavering and tremulous, that of the water rises and falls with a steady swell,—Charles E, Chidsey in Popular Science Monthly.

English Pure and Undefiled.

Quite at random I make up a list of articles to which the English assign names different from those we use.
That which we call a bowl is here known as a basin. In England you ask for a basin of bread and milk.
That which is known to us as a pitcher is here called a jug.
A donkey is here called a moke; in America a moke is a negro. Local slang for a cab horse is "cat's meat," because the meat of horses is peddled around the streets for feeding to cats. By the way, British cats average much larger than our American cats, and they are notorious chicken killers. The brindle cat seems to be the commonest.

What is love known as a bash, we

The brindle cat seems to be the commonest.

What is here known as a hash we should call a stew, and what we call a hash is here known as a mince.

In England our overcoat becomes a great coat, and our undershirt becomes a vest and our drawers become pantalons. It is said that when Mr. George W. Childs, of Philadelphia, was in London, a number of years ago, he walked into a haberdashery and seeking to appear to be a native, asked to be shown the styles in silk waistcoats. "Jeems," cried the proprietor to his assistant, "step this way and show this Hamerican gentleman our flowery weskits!"—Eugene Field's Letter in Chicago News.

The Language of the Vell.

The art of adjusting the veil properiv and coquettishly belongs to the Frenehwoman. To the Englishwoman the veil is almost purely an article of utility. The American woman is like Spanish woman alone belongs the art and skillful arrangement of the veil in such ravishing folds that every good int of her features becomes promi-nt, while all the shaky ones retire to

The fan and veil are the two weapons of warfare with which the Spanish woman attacks the world. They are her defense as a modest maiden under her duenna's eye, and they are her valued mise en scene when the duenna looks the other way. A playful toss of her veil or the languid opening or shutting of her fan are her resources in flirtation. Rob a fair Castilian of her mantilla, and then seek her beauty, and you will find that it has vanished.

I have lots of fun with bridal couples who climb the dome. Nearly every day I go to the other side of the immense arched painting, which is a perfect whisper gallery, and hear them spooning. When they get too affectionate I turn my back, look up at the painting and say: "This is no place for love making." My voice goes over them in sepulchral tones, and they take away with them a vivid assurance of ghostly watchers in the dome.—Washington Letter.

I believe there is nothing that takes the heart out of young men more than this modern talk about a pull. If one gives over to it he begins to neglect his work in his effort to get a pull, or he becomes disheartened because he has no pull, and so gives over trying to do his best. I hear so much of this talk that I wish my voice could reach these tempted young men. They are being paralyzed by the pull craze. as a "desprit hard place."

It was the toughest of the tough.
Though a comparatively young town at the date of the incident about to be in the crowd could realize it. The idea recorded, its notorious wickedness had advertised it far and wide, and Four advertised it far and wide, and Four Hole City was an accepted synonym for the unique and superlative in western wretchedness. Its population varied according to the distance and direction of the latest gold find.

It could hardly be said that the growth of Four Hold City was phenomenal—that it was a magic city or anything of that sort. But it grew. Trade was lively at the Red Finger bar, and the cemetery spread like a green bay tree. In due course of time there was another barroom and another

Then Little Jug Nancy came, the first woman, and forthwith another grave-yard was added to the list—three of them in seven months.

So alluring was the opportunity, in fact, that a speculative undertaker was tempted across the mountains from —preaching in Four Hole City! Benediction! Prayer!

Mr. Philip S. The method of arrangement originated and adopted by Mayor Johnson in the publication of the Woburn Records of Births by which the surnames are arranged alphanetically and the Christian names are all grouped in chronological order under their roper surname, has met with hearty enforcement by men connected with historical and antiquarian societies in this State. The State Commissioner of Public Records has sken the pains to send a sample page of Mr. Johnson's book, together with the oreface, to every City and Town Clerk in he state, accompanied with the following sircular letter:

Dean Six:—I have had many inquiries a regard to the best method of copying the births, marriages and deaths from old ecords. By the courtesy of Hon. Edward E. Plain Talk.

WINCHESTER, April 29, 1890.

TO EDITOR OF JOHNAL: In last week's issue of the Journal I noticed, under the heading Winchester, an article purporting to express the sentiments of the people of Winchester, on a certain matter. Lest it should cause a false impression in the minds of your readers, permit me to inform them that the sentiment expressed in that article is not the sentiment of the people of Winchester, as a whole.

We know our little town is a charming apot, seeming to be intended by nature as a place of peace and pleasant abode, and it would be a pity to destroy its natural beauty with manufactories and the like.

We extend a hearty welcome to the artist, the musician, the literary and learned, "the business man of Boston," and the man of "elegant leisure." We delight to have our rison built up with headsome mansions and artistic cottages. We appreciate art, learning, and culture. We are round to be considered the conservatory, the drawing-room, of the "Athens of America." But we extend an equal welcome to any self-respecting person, be he artist or mechanic, who wishes to make his home in our midst and help along the prosperity of the town.

The "old fogy and moss-back," the old settler and conservative, have a right to their opinions and their Jeffersonian principles, and we hope they will gladden our sight for many a year yet. They have our respect and our graitude for they are our fathers, and the builders of our town, and they have all their share in making it attractive.

While not at all desirous for manufactures commerce and mechanics, and all such low-plebeans stuff and nonsense" dispapeared from the world what would become of professors, weaken the state of the propersity of a town providing some manufacturing town is conveniently handy. I would like to know if "manufactures, commerce and mechanics, and all such low-plebeans stuff and nonsense" dispapeared from the world what would become of professors, we have the subject of the propersion of the propersion of the very dependen out it. This Peter the Great recognized when he stooped to become a plebearan himself and by it he built up a great nation and his own immortal name.

"Low plebeian," indeed! Nice expression from one enjoying the advantages of a plebeian nation! Why, the very essence of freedom is plebeian, that of slavery, natrician! What were one.

from one enjoying the advantages of a ple-beian nation! Why, the very essence of freedom is plebeian, that of slavery, parti-cian! What were our forefathers, the vigor-ous pioneers of a new country? What were the signers of the Declaration of Independ-ence; the "Father of the American Revo-lution," the "Father of his Country," the "Father of the American Navy?" The very soll is watered with the blood of the plebeian, the hero of the Revolution, the patriot of 1812, and the Rebellion. When our country calls, where, O where is the patrician—the professor, the artist, the business man, and man of elegant leisure? There is not a stone laid in his architect-tural residence, nor an angle, line or curve completed, nor a fresco on his aesthetic walls, nor a piece of furniture, nor drapery, nor carpet, nor an article of food on his sumptuous table, that has not been touched by the hand of the "low plebeian."

In a sentence then, who and what has placed our Republic the foremost nation on the earth? The low plebeian, the old fogy and moss-back, with their "manufactures, commerce, mechanics and all such low ple-beian stuff and nonsense."—E. M. O.

LESSON VI, SECOND QUARTER, IN-TERNATIONAL SERIES, MAY 11.

Fext of the Lesson, Luke is, 10-17-Com mit Verses 16, 17—Golden Text, John vi, 35—Commentary by the Rev. D. M.

Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly by permission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadel-computed from Lesson freque quartery by per-mission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadel-phia.]

The sending forth of the twelve, and the beheading of John the Baptist, briefly refer-red to in the opening verses of this chapter, are more fully recorded by Matthew and Mark. In connection with the first, it is worthy of note that He had just taught them to pray that the Lord of the harvest would send forth laborers into His harvest; then He called the twelve and sent them forth to knower their own prayers. When we pray let us remember that God expects us to be willing to be used by Him in answering our prayers.

for He Himself spent whole nights in prayer to God.

11. "And the people, when they knew it, followed Him." John says that Jesus crossed the Sea of Galilee, and the people followed because they saw His miracles. Matthew and Mark say that Jesus went by ship and that the people followed on foot and outwent Him. In the boat He would be an hour or two alone with His disciples, and they would lave a little rest; but what a busy life He lived; it was true of Him "The zeal of thine house hath eaten me up" (Ps. lxix, 9; John ii, 17).

kingdom, of which Jesus had been speaking, could make even the twelve forget that they were hungry men. They had seen Him still the storm and raise the dead, but they seemed not to consider that the same power could feel these hungry thousands. Their wisdom was to let them sentter where they might, and find food and shelter as they were able in the towns and country round about. The old question still lived, "Can God furnish a table in the wilderness?" (Ps. lxxviii, 19).

13 "flut He said anto them, Give ye them to eat." He had asked Philip, "Whence shall we buy bread that these may ent" and Philip had replied that they would need about two hundred pennyworth toglive every one a little. "We have no more but five leaves and two fishes." When He asked Philip, He did it to prove him, for He Himself knew what He would to Golan vi, 6, just as He so often lets us get into a strait place to prove us, while all the time He knows the way out and just what He will do.

all the time He knows the way out and just what He will do.

14, 15. "And He said to His disciples, Make them sit down by fifties in a company. And they did so, and made them all sit down."

Mark says: "Upon the green grass." John says: "There was meeh grass in the place" (Mark vi, 39; John vi, 10). The thousands were all now orderly arranged and seated in companies upon the green grass. Matthew says there were 5,000 men besides women and children (Matt. xiv, 21); so there may have been 120 companies of 50 cach, or ten companies to each of the twelve disciples. But observe the order, and remember the precept, "Let all things be done decently and in order," for God is not the author of confusion (I Cor, xiv, 33, 40). A disorderly home or room or wardrobe or bereau drawer or officer store is no credit to a Christian. Confusion, disorder, tunuit, unquietness are none have been all that twelve men could obtain from five loaves and two fishes, here is a basketful for each. Had they selfably kept what they had for themselves, how little they would have had, but by giving it away what abundance becomes theirs. Afraid to give to God lest we have not enough for ourselves, we continue poor; but when we cheerfully give Him that which is all Bis own any way, then He makes us to enjoy flis fullness, and our cup runneth over. "The blessing of the Lord, it maketh rich; and He addeth no sorrow with it? (Prov. x, 22). He gave Himself to be broken and poured forth for us; why should we hestate to place ourselves in His hands most unreservedly, that we may be broken and passed round by His hands for the life of others! It may not be pleasant to the flesh, but it will be wenderfully profitable. "Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone; but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit? (John xii, 24). Who is willing to be passed round for the good of others, not loving his life here, so that he may keep it unto life eternal? Some miracles are recorded by all four, and it is, I think, the only

A Story of the Bravery Exhibited at the Battle of Seven Pines.

"At the battle of Seven Pines," said Dr. R., "I was 'a man under authority,' being deputy sawbones for the Virginia regiment. I was a short, stout specimen, and notwithstanding the cares and responsibilities of my position and the anti-fat treatment to which the depleted condition of the commissariat subjected me, tipped the beam at 220 pounds, and was good natured and jolly, and the boys of the regiment, many of whom were old acquaintances, were irreverent enough to apply to me all sorts of nicknames.

"The evening before the battle I had aken up position somewhat in advance of the army, being unaware of the proximity of the enemy and of the act that a flerce battle was impending. Next morning I was intently engaged in making Confed. coffee out of toast-ad crackers, when the army began to advance. As my regiment passed to the front, the boys would pitch knapsacks, haversacks, blankets, etc., toward me with such expressions as: Say, Taurus, take care of that for me, pld fellow, 'Bull, look out for that, please,' Dock, hold on to this for me, etc., until I was fairly environed by the baggage.

"My preparations for breakfast were the baggage.

"My preparations for breakfast were disturbed by the scream of an occasional shell as it passed overhead, causing me to quit my coffee and assume a perpendicular. Nevertheless I stood my ground. Soon, however, the crack, crack, crack, pop, pop, pop of small arms showed that the infantry were engaged; and the Minies beginning to mark the saplings and cut up the ground round about, I commenced a dignified and organized retrograde movement in the direction of a large pine tree some 200 or 300 yards to the rear.

"As I advanced backwards, the firing increased, and also my speed—first a a large pine tree some 200 or 300 yards to the rear.

"As I advanced backwards, the firing increased, and also my speed—first a trot, then a canter, then a gallop and finally—well, the very best I had in the shop. The air was filled with missiles of all sorts and sizes, and I was fairly panicked. But, great Cæsar's ghost! What a sight met my eyes as I approached the tree.

"There were six warriors sheltered behind it, arranged according to size. No. 1 sat with his back against the trunk, his legs apartand extended; No. 2 with his back close up to No. 1, and thus they were strang out to the end. No. 6, a poor, miscrable, worm eaten, attenuated specimen, had imbedded his heels in the earth and stuck as close to No. 5 as the bark to a tree; in fact, herrings were never packed closer in a barrel than were these worthies. With the glance of genius I took in the situation, and recognized the fact that the authority of might entitled me to a position next to the tree.

"Accordingly, without ceremony and without a word, I threw my leg over the head of No. 1, got astride of him, as it were, let go all holds and trusted to Providence. My superior weight carried me slowly but surely to the ground, and I became No. I. Each man was advanced exactly to the extent of space occupied by me, and No. 6, now No. 7, whose position was most exposed, held his ground manfully and cut a furrow in the earth with each heel as he was thrust forward. As I gradually settled down I heard him exclaim with great earnestness: 'I say, back there, don't scrouge!"—Washington Critic.

Inventing Ornamental Glass.

Dwellers by the sea have noticed for years that their window panes grow dull by the sand blown against them. Gen. B. C. Tilghman, of Philadelphia, about twenty years ago was the first to see how much this familiar fact meant. He thought that if a little sand blown against glass cuts its surface, the operation could be reduced from years to minutes if a great deal of sand were biown against the glass by pressure. His experiments proved his surmise to be true, and now in hundreds of factories throughout the country the sand blast is busy not only cutting glass for ornamental purposes, but shaping glass for builders and finishing files of hard steel for tool shops.

About Trying on Shoes.

I find there are not nearly as many ladies try on shoes in my store as formerly. They prefer to have them sent home, where they can dump themselves down on the floor and try them on according to their accustomed manner of putting on their shoes. Of course, in my store, they have to sit upon a chair or sofa, to try on their shoes. I am thinking seriously of having a boudor fitted up, with Turkish rugs or Moquette carpet, where ladies may retire to try on their shoes as they please. I think it would be a great hit.—Interview in New York News.

A More Modern Subject.
A young playwright whose MS, has been returned asks the reason for its refusal. "Great heavens!" the manager exclaims, "its title is 'Ninus II.' I find the subject rather antiquated, and should prefer something more modern." "Very well," exclaimed the author, with an inspired air, "I understand you; you shall be suited." Five days later he brought another piece, entitled "Ninus III."—Paris Figaro.

ROBBING A SAFE.

How a Suave Burglar Outwitted a Special How a Soave Burglar Outwitted a Special Fatrolman in Denver.
A night watchman who was employed to protect a jewelry store in Denver against the ragaves of thieves was neatly outwitted by the notorious Billy Forrester some years before his death, The firm carried an immense ctock of gems, and kept them in a large, old fashioned safe. Forrester had by long years' experience become so familiar with safes of that pattern that he could tell when to reverse and when to turn fashioned safe. Forrester had by long years' experience become so familiar with safes of that pattern that he could tell when to reverse and when to turn the knob forward, by placing his ear close to the door above the combination, and in this way could open the safe in a short time. By taking a wax impression of the keyhole he made a key for the front door. Having previously located the safe in the store, he was now ready to begin. It was a cold, snowy, stormy night, about 10 o'clock, and Forrester walked up to the store with an air of ownership and unlocked the door. He carried a small sample case in his hand. Going in, he turned up the gas in the rear of the store and then shook down the stove. He leisurely worked the combination to the safe, and in less than half an hour he had before him thousands of dollars worth of costly jewels and gold watches. At this very interesting point the night watchman came in.

"Good evening," said the cordial burglar, as he continued to remove valuables from the safe to his sample case. "Come back to the fire and warm yourself; it is very cold out to night."

The patrolman allowed that it was, and sauthered back to the stove.

"I'm packing up my samples," went to on the thief snavely. "Going out on the road in the morning, and thought I would get ready to-night. There! isn't that a beauty?' he asked, holding out an elegant Jurgensen for the watchman to examine.

In this way Forrester packed over $2000 worth of gens and watches into his sample case, chatting cheerfully twith the night watchman all the while.

As he was about to close the sample case he stopped suddenly as if struck by a happy thought, and then picked up a very pretty ring. Turning to the watchman he asked him if he had a wife. The watchman had and with a careless laugh Forrester tossed him I the ring saying: "Give her that, and tell her it is a mark of appreciation for the faithful services rendered by her husband."

The brilliant guardian of other people's property was delighted, and was unusually wide awake all the rest of the night. It was not until next morning that he became aware of the hoax that had been practiced upon him. Forrester by that time was well out of the way, and his connection with the robbery was not discovered till a few days before his death, when he confessed it.—Exchange.

The Earliest Hospitals.

The first germ of the hospital idea meets us about the close of the Second cent ray. At about this date, in times of war, there were attached to the Roman camps a "valetudinarium" and a "veterinarium." In the former, only those were treated who were seriously wounded or diseased; previously to this time the disabled soldier would receive such rough care as the age afforded, either in his own tent or in a neighboring cottage. Under Tiberias, who paid no little attention to the well being of his soldiers, ambulances with easy cushions were provided for the transportation of the sick. The first complete establishment for the reception of the sick was built by Basil the Great, at - Casarea, in Cappadocia (Asia Minor), soon after he became archbishop of that see (A. D. 370).— Once a Week.

Poisoned in a Museum.

A bundle of arrows from the Solomon Islands was sent to England many years ago, and desposited with other curiosities in a museum at Colchester. A gentleman visiting the museum foolishly handled these weapons, and, feeling the point of one of these arrows, inflicted a prick like that of a pm. He died of it, in raving agony, three days afterward. The symptoms are invariably those of tetanus or lockjaw, a malady for which no remedy has ever been discovered.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Tarantulas in Vermont.

While a boy was cutting bananas from a bunch hanging in front of a Burlington (Vt.) grocery store, a large tarantula sprang at him striking him on the side of the neck. From the boy's neck the insect leaped into a barrel half full of crackers. No one caring to meddle with such an ugly customer, at the suggestion of a policeman the barrel was dosed with kerosene and then carried into the street and set on fire.—Philadelphia Ledger.

There are now 12,500 acres of oyster beds in the basin of Arcachon, in the Bay of Biscay. Several thousand men and women are employed in the work, and the average annual sale of oysters by Dr. Johnston's firm is 200,000,000. when burdened with business, fortune and honor, but it can be done, for it has been done.

Lord Hatherly was an eminent lawyer and learned lord chancellor, but for forty years he was a Sunday school teacher among the poor of Westminster. Even while lord chancellor of England he was to be found every Sunday, seated among the poor workingmen's children reading and explaining to them the scriptures.

But the great man's life was as wonderful in its simplicity as in its devotion to duty. Once, by special invitation of Queen Victoria, he visited her at Windsor castle, and remained over night. On the morning of his departure, the queen said she wished he would stay another night at the castle, Secing that he seemed perplexed, she said:

"Why do you hesitate, my lord?"

"Your majesty," answered the lord chancellor, "I have never, since I was married, been parted from my wife for four and twenty hours before."

"Oh, I won't keep you, then," exclaimed the queen, with that ready sympathy which is one of her traits.

Lord Hatherly returned home, and when again the queen invited him to Windsor she was careful to ask him to bring Lady Hatherly.—Youth's Companion.

A Woman at the Old Books Auction A Woman at the Old Books Auction.
I was over at an auction sale of old books the other day. The auctioneer held up a dusty volume which from the title was worth about ten cents and asked the usual question, "How much?"
A woman in the crowd said "Fifty cents."

The auctioneer began crying fifty cents, wanting to know if he heard "the sixty." As he asked the question his eyes necidentally turned toward the bidder and she nodded. The aucthe bidder and she nodded. The auctioneer began crying sixty cents and wanted to know if he heard "the seventy." The woman nodded and the auctioneer took the bid and cried "seventy cents; do I hear the eighty?" The woman nodded again. This kept up till the woman had run her bid up to $2.50. The auctioneer then asked her name, whereupon he said, "Sold to Mrs. — for fifty cents," whereat the crowd roared, but the poor woman didn't seem to know what the roar meant. She paid her fifty cents, tucked the book under her shawl, and went out.—Chicago Tribune.

How Savages Poison Their Arrows.

Where do these savages get this atrocious poison and what does it consist of? They get it from their own flesh and blood, and it consists of nothing but the fluids of the human body. When they want a supply of poisoned weapons they take a number of corpses after a battle, or they kill a number of prisoners expressly, and, having left the bodies to putrefy in the burning equatorial sun for some days, they stick them full of spears and arrow heads, which they leave there for weeks or months, or until the bodies are entirely dried up. That is the whole process. When those spears and arrows are drawn out, they are imperishably steeped in poison as deadly as that of Echys carinata or wourali—a poison which is absolutely destructive of the life of every creature whose blood it touches.—Pittsburg Dispatch. How Savages Poison Their Arrows.

A Remarkable Suicide.

One of the most remarkable suicides recorded in the annals of self destruction occurred near Chiquet, N. B. Before committing the rash act, the self murderer, a Mr. W. R. T. Jones, dug his grave and placed a rough coffin of his own make at the bottom. The dirt from the grave was kept from rolling back into the excavation by boards held in place by a trigger, to which a string was attached. Everything in readiness, the deliberate Mr. Jones, as subsequent developments revealed, got in the coffin, took a dose of poison and then pulled the string and was buried beneath tons of dirt. It is believed to be one of the most unique and successful instances of suicide on record.—St. Louis Republic.

How to Breathe.

Close the mouth, throw the shoulders well back, with the weight of the body resting on the balls of the fect.

This is the only correct way to stand. Such a posture throws the abdomen backward instead of forward, exactly where it belongs. By means of the nostrils draw in the breath deeply and slowly, and let it out in the same manner. If those who are troubled with superfluous abdominal tissue will do this a dozen times a day, and get into the habit of breathing with the stomach and the abdomen, and inflating every part of the lungs, they will not only lay the foundation of good health but they will be shapely in figure and graceful in carriage.—New York Let ter.

How Satin Was Discovered.

Octavio Mai, a silk weaver, finding business very dull and not knowing what to invent to give a new impulse to the trade, was one day pacing to and fro before his loom. Every time he passed the machine, with no definite object in view, he pulled little threads from the warp and put them to his mouth, which soon after he spat out. Later on he found the little ball of silk on the floor of his workshop, and attracted by the brilliant appearance of the threads, he repeated the experiment, and by using certain mucilaginous preparations succeeded in giving satin to the world.—Exchange.

A Second Edition of Paris.

A second Edition of Paris.

Society in Buenos Ayres is gradually becoming more and more European. One walking the streets just now observes that we have become almost a second edition of Paris. The fashions of that gay city are copied by men and women alike, and the fact that we have 200,000 Frenchmen in the Republic, in round numbers, has made a decided impression on the social customs of the people. A man landing here from Paris finds himself perfectly at home, and would hardly dream that he was so far away from his native land. The same applies equally to a Frenchwoman. She hardly misses the gay life of the gayest capital of all the world. they left the earth; where have they been and what have they been doing? But we must wait.

31, "Who appeared in glory, and spake of His decease which He should accomplish at Jorusalem." This verse and the next are peculiar to Luke, Matthew and Mark, simply saying that Moses and Elijah talked with Jesus, and omitting all reference to the disciples being heavy with sleep.

"And when they were awake, they saw Hi, glory, and the two men that stood with Him." The R. V. says, "When they were fully awake," and in the margin "Having remained awake." He was gracious unto them and suffered them not to lose all. They saw His glory, and they saw Moses and Elijah. Peter refers to it as "The power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ," and says "We were eye witnesses of His Majesty" (If Fet. i, 10). At the same time Feter toils us that we have a more sure word of prophecy whereunto we do well to take heed.

33, "And it came to pass, as they departed from Him, Peter said unto Jesus, Master, it is good for us to be here; and let us make three tabernacles; * * not knowing what He said." Had he been wide awake and heard the conversation between Jesus, Moses and Elijah he would probably have talked more wisely and have known what he was talking about.

34. "While He thus spake, there came a cloud: and overshadowed them, and they feared as they entered into the cloud." All through the wilderness "the Lord went before them in a piliar of cloud." When the Tabernacle was crected "a cloud covered the tent of the congregation, and the glory of the Lord filled the Tabernacle," and when the temple was dedicated the house was filled with a cloud and with the glory of the Lord (Ex. xiii, 21; x), 34; 11 CLr. v. 13, 14). In the vision of Isaiah (xi. 4) the house was filled with a cloud and with the glory of the Lord dilated the filled with shock, and Ezskiel (i. 4) saws a great cloud, and a fire infolding itself, and a brightness about it. At His ascension a cloud received Him, and when He comes again it will be in the clouds of Henven (Acts i. 6; Matt, xxvi, 63). So also when the risen and translated saints meet Him in the air, it shall be in the clouds of Henven (Acts i. 6; Matt, xxvi, 63). So also when the risen and translated saints meet Him in the air, it shall be in the clouds (I Th. iv, 17). As to therefore, so carribly are we and so little awake to Heavenly realities, that anything unearthing or even unusual is apt to fill us with awo.

Hold It To The Light.

The man who tells you confidentially just what will cure your cold is prescribing Kemp's Balsam this year. In the preparation of this remarkable medicine for cough; and colds no expense is spared to combine only the best and purest ingredients. Hold a bottle of Kemp's Balsam to the light and look through it; notice the bright, clear look; then compare with other remedies. Price 50c. and 81. Over 60 people were forced to leave their homes yesterday to call at their druggists for a free trial package of Lane's Family Medicines. If your blood is bad, your liver and kidneys out of order, if you are constipated and have headache and an unsightly complexion, don't fall to call on any druggists to-day for a free sample of this grand remedy. The ladies praise it. Everyone likes it. Large size packages 50 cents.

Dyspepsia causes depraved blood, which, in time, affects every organ and function of the body. As a remedy for these troubles, nothing can approach Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It vitalizes the blood, strengthens the stomach, and corrects all disorders of the liver and kidneys.

THREE-YEAR-OLD'S IDEA OF KISSES.

Ishowered upon his dimpled checks
Sly kisses by the score,
Then hugged my darling to my heart,
And stole some twenty more.
He did not murnur or oppose,
But still and passive ladid;
In thoughtful mood he asked me then:
'Of what are kisses made?'
'I cannot tell you, precious one,
Just make a few yourself,
Perhaps you then can answer, dear,
Your query, you sweet elf.'
Up came two ruby, rosy lips,
On neck, and check, and brow,
He made some kisses; then said,
'Ah, can't you answer now'
With thoughtful mien and winning smile,
He turned his eyes above.
Then said, 'Why, mamma dear, I fink,
They're made, just made of love.'

An Everlasting Book.

The most singular material for bookmaking is proposed by Professor Castagnatta, and partially carried out by Professor Burkham, of Brunswick. His idea was to make a book indestructible by printing in gold or silver letters upon thin leaves of asbestos, the binding to be of a thicker sheet of asbestos. Neither time nor fire could have any effect upon a volume of this kind, and it might well merit the title of "the book of eternity."—New York Telegram. Telegram.

English People Changing Color.
There is no question that the English people, as a whole, are darkening fast. This is due to the influence of town life. In country districts "lint white" children succeed to lint white parents; but they drift more and more to the great centers, where in the second generation they become brown and in the third or fourth develop those mongrel hues which distinguish a city population. And this means that they deteriorate.—St. James Gazette.

Chapped Hands and Lips.

Chapped Hands and Lips.
Chapped hands and lips are a common complaint. The best preparation I ever found for the hands is; Three ounces of lemon juice, three ounces of white wine vinegar and one-half pint of white brandy. For the lips; Oil of roses, four ounces; one ounce white wax, and of spermaceti one-half an ounce. Melt in a glass vessel and stir with a wooden spoon. Pour into a china cup or glass.—M. E. Conlin's Letter.

A STORY FROM INDIANAPOLIS.

A Terrible and Eventul Ride on a Boat Hauled by a Hoge Cat Fish. The Ananias club welcomed Patrol-man Brady back from New Orleans as he walked into the clubroom the other

When it snapped it made a report like he explosion of a ten pound cannon in a Fourth of July morning. Releaved of his drug weight, the fish dart-dahead and was soon out of sight, bur boat had such headway that she an two hundred miles before stoping. A flatboat, you understand, is of fitted up with automatic brakes, ind we had no way of checking her peed until the momentum was exausted. It is a mighty lucky thing or us that the rope did break. Had it of parted we would have been caided a death, sure. The heavy three inch ky planks out of which the boat was silt were worn down to the thinnest fissue paper. We were going so at that the water acted just like a ckplane on the wood. A few hours ager and the boat would have been mere bunch of shavings, and in the filing water we would have been mere bunch of shavings, and in the filing water we would have suffered horrible death."—Indianapolis News.

By the new measurement the famous Mount Popocatepett of Mexico, supposed to be one of the highest mountains in the world, is not quite so high as Mount Tacoma, the marvelous mountain that towers three miles into the air within sight of the city of Tacoma on Puget Sound. From the city Mount Tacoma is so grand and so vivid in every feature that it seems to be almost within rifle shot. "How far off is the mountain?" a stranger was asked one evening, when the sunset flush reddened the lovely peak of eternal snow. "It is farther away than it appears, I would be appeared to be almost within rifle shot. papers are all provided in regard to census work, but this is but a mere trifle. Their editors are asked to furnish, grants, statistical information involving a great deal of research and the consumption of a great deal of valuable time. One would think that Superintendent Porter, himself a newspaper man, would know better than to ask such information as a favor when the government is abundantly able to pay for the collection of it and should do so. Our own impression based on a decidedly unpleasant personal experience is, that outside of the salaries of recognized offices the United States is a mighty poor paymaster.—Waltham Free Press.

Death of Miss Martha Lillian Thompsom. Never before in our experience have we been called upon to chronicle such a sad event as the death of Miss Martha Lillian Thompson, the beloved and only child of Mr. and Mrs. Abijah Thompson, which took place at the home of h parents on Church street last Saturday evening, shortly before eleven o'clock. The circumstances surrounding her death, are most painful: Suffering with insomnia for the past few weeks from over exertion, and by unskilled advice, a resort was had to chloral which in her inexperienced hands resulted in an overdose and death. The story in brief is as follows: As is his habit, Mr. Thompson spent the early evening in the historical room in his search for early records connected with our town, and in which he takes a great interest. Returning home between nine and ten parents on Church street last Saturday and in which he takes a great interest. Returning home between nine and ten o'clock his attention was called to the labored breathing within his daughter's room. Becoming alarmed he quickly gained entrance where he found his daughter lying on the floor in a heavy stupor. Dr. and Mrs. Church were hastily summoned and all the skill known to medical science was resorted to to save the young lady, but she remained unconscious, passing away at the above hour.

Mr. and Mrs. Thompson are com-pletely prostrated with grief over the death of their idolized daughter. Miss Thompson was about eighteen years of age, was carefully educated, had all that heart could wish for, and everything was done by her parents to make Text of the Lesson, Luke x, 1-16—Commit Verses 8-11—Golden Text, Luke x, 11-Commentary by the Rev. D. M.

Many things have transpired in the life of our Lord between the transfiguration and the sending out of these seventy. We will just indicate them and where they may be found. After they came down from the mount, He cast out a dumb spirit which the disciples could not cast out; He again fore-told his violent death; He taught humility by the little child; He rebuked the disciples because they forbade one to cast out devils in Jesus' name, simply because he was not of by the little child; He rebuked the disciples because they forbade one to cast out devils in Jesus' name, simply because he was not of their company; He journeyed through Samaria on His way to Jerusalem, but is rejected by the Samaritans; He talks to several who desire to follow Him. All this is briefly mentioned in Luke ix, 37-93. Matthew and Mark record some things more fully. But according to Mimpriss' Harmony we must insert between the 50th and 51st verses of Luke ix, the whole of Matt, xviii (which is peculiar to Matthew), and the whole of John vii, 2, to xi, 54 (which is peculiar to John).

1. "After these things the Lord appointed other seventy also, and sent them two and lace whither He Himself would come." In the previous chapter (v. 51) it is written that "When the time was come that He should be received up, He steadfastly set His face to go to Jerusalem," It would seem, therefore, that the sending forth of these seventy was a last appeal ere His crucifixion.

2. "Pray ye the Lord of the harvest, that He would send forth laborers into His harvest," The same words concerning the greatness of the harvest and the need of laborers He spake before He sent out the twelve; and on another occasion He said "Lift up your eyes, and look on the fields; for they are white aiready to harvest" (Matt. ix, 37; John iy, 35). Is not the same cry with greater power than ever wringing in our cars today! Open doors every where in all the world, but where are the laborers True, there are more going for than ever before; but one mission alone (the China Inland) is asking for 200 additional Jaborers a year for the next live years, to occupy in some measure the vast fields of China.

3. "Go your ways: behold, I send you forth 3."

fields of China.
3. "Go your ways: behold, I send you forth as lambs among wolves." Compare His instructions to these with His instructions to structions to these with His instructions to the twelve in start x.

4. "Carry neither purse, nor scrip, nor shoes; and salute no man by the way." Carry no money, no food nor bag to put it in, no extra clothing. Have no anxiety about outfit or expenses; leave all that to the manager and proprietor who sends you. This is His affair, and He will take care of His workmen.
Do not stop by the way for the sake of earthly friendships, or to do honor one to another;
you are going forth to honor the King, and the King's business must be done quickly.
None who go in His name, relying on Him, will lack any good thing. (Lu. xxii, 35; Ps.
lxxxiv, II, Rom, viii, 32)

5. "And into whatsoever house ye enter, first say, Peace be to this house." He is the Prince of Peace; He is the Peace of God; He is our Peace when we receive Him (Rs. ix, 6;
Phil. iv, 7; Eph. ii, 19, and the commission of all whom He sends is to preach peace by Jesus Christ (Acts x, 36; Rom, v, 1). Perfect peace is the privilege of all whose minds are stayed on Him, but it is His own peace, and can only come to a heart wholly subject to God in all things as His was (fsa, xxvi, 3; John xiv, 27).

6. "If the Son of Peace be there." They the gospet should live of the gospel; and the laborer is worthy of his reward (I Cor. ix, 14; I Tim. v, 18).

8. "Whatsoever city." In verse 5 it was "whatsoever house." The whoseovers and whatsoevers of Scripture area glorious study, and open wide the door to the unsearchable riches of Christ for all who are willing to enter in. God comes in mercy to cities, and households, and individuals, offering His love to all, but not foreing himself upon any. He gives the best He has, but leaves it to us to offer Him such as we choose.

9. "Heal the sick that are therein, and say unto them, The Kingdom of God is come nigh unto you." Blind eyes opened, deaf ears unstopped, lame people healed, no body sick, and all this in connection with the forgiveness of iniquity, were features of the Kingdom foreted by the prophets; and this did not refer to Hoaven, but to the land and people of Irsael (Isa, xxxv, 1-10; xxxiii, 20-2a, 10, 11. "But finto whatsoever city ye enter, and they receive you not." In obedience to Christ they were to go their way into the city proclaiming peace, but if that peace was rejected they were to go their way out of the city, wiping its very dust from their feet, and at the same time assuring the city that the kingdom of God had come nigh unto them.

12. "It shall be more tolerable in that day for Sodom than for that city," At least two things are clear from this statement; the people of Sodom have yet to come into judy-ment; and punishment at that time will be cunities which have been slighted. For those who knew and did not, there shall be many stripes; while for those who knew not and lid not there shall be few stripes (Luke xii,

THE PHANTOM STEAMBOAT.

There are some modern stories of Devil's lake in Dakota.

There are some modern stories of Devil's lake which vie in superstitious fancies with those of the aboriginal age. The phantom steamboat is a creation in which a number of people have implicit faith. Some weird tales are told of how this airy creation goes puffing up and down the silent lake in the darkness of summer nights, its special fires gleaming on the black water and the beat of its serew keeping up a rhy thmic motion that becomes suddenly silent on the approach of a mortal.

water and the beat of its screw keeping up a rhythmic motion that becomes suddenly silent on the approach of a mortal.

The first appearance of the phantom steamboat was early in the eighties. At that time the government had a small steamboat plying on the lake between the fort and the settlement of Devil's Lake on the opposite shore. Leave of absence was often given to the soldiers to go over to the town and spend a day and night. For this purpose a small schooner was employed, it having been built by the men before the government constructed a steam vessel. Then it was a common thing for the civilians around the fort settlement to cross this lake and take up land and buy town lots in the new city, for the North Dakota boom was then getting under way. Frank Paler, the Indian trader at the reservation, tells the story:

"There had been quite a lot of us over at the settlement, and on a Sunday evening we started to return in the sailboat. If I remember rightly there were thirteen in the party, nearly all soldiers from the fort. We had just got rightly started when one of those high winds which suddenly spring up on the lake came down on us, and it was no time until our sailing gear got out of order and useless. When the storm subsided we were om absence leave, which expired on Sanday night, and consequently they were in a great state of anxiety over our helpless condition. It grew dark.

"As we had no oars we were compelled to sit helpless. There wasn't a drop of anything stronger than the seemed to be the noise of escaping steam was heard distinctly. Instantly the conclusion was reached that some-body at the fort had winessed our predicament before sunset and had started the steamboat. We listened, and what seemed to be the noise of escaping steam was heard distinctly. Instantly the conclusion was reached that some-body at the fort had winessed our predicament before sunset and had started the steamboat out to our relief. I strained my eyes in the direction from which the sound came, and, sure enough, the shado

5. "And into whatsoever house ye enter, first say, Peace be to this house." He is the Prince of Peace; He is the Peace of God; He is our Peace when we receive Him (fas. ix, 6; 19thl. iv, 7; Eph. ii, 19, and the commission of all whom He sends is to preach peace by Jesus Christ (Acts x, 36; Rom. v, 1). Perfect peace is the privilege of all whose minds are stayed on Him, but it is His own peace, and can only come to a heart wholly subject to God in all things as His was (Isa. xxvi, 3; John xiv, 27).

6. "If the Son of Peace be there." They were not taught to expect a reception in every house.

7. "Eating and drinking such things as they give, for the laborer is worthy of his hire." When they found a welcome in any house, there they were to abide, and be content with such fare as might be provided, not running from house to house for the sake of receiving better fare. We are not to think to much of what we eat, but where we are welcome there receive and gratefully partake of whatever is set before us (Cor. x, 27). The Lord hath ordained that they who preach the gospel should live of the gospel, and the laborer is worthy of his reward (Cor. x, 27). The Lord hath ordained that they who peach the gospel should live of the gospel, and the laborer is worthy of his reward (Cor. x, 27). An empty cattle train pulled out from the stock yards and in the caboose was a particularly disagreeable drover, who was homeward bound. After the train started he threw his buffalo overcoat on the forward bench and fell asleep. One of the brakemen secured a rope and cautiously tied one end of it tightly around the fellow's ankles. The other end he anchored to a heavy hook overheard. Then another brakeman took the coal scuttle, filled it full of newspapers, put it directly over the sleeper's head and touched a match to it. As the papers blazed up the two brakemen, who had taken a position on the roof, poked their heads through the lookoint capola and yelled "Fire!" The drover awoke, saw the flames and started up. The rope held his feet and he came down with a thump on the floor of the car. There was a bump on his forehead in ten minutes that was as big as an ostrich's egg. But he was meeker after that.—Chicago Herald.

13. "Woe unto thee, Cherazin! we unto thee, Bethsaida!" Similar words had Housed on a previous occasion; and at another time He had said that the men of Ninoveh and the Queen of the South would rise in judgment against that nation (Matt. xi. 20-24; xii, 41-42). He says these things at this time, no doubt, to impress upon the severty the importance of their mission, and the awful responsibility resting upon those whe might reject them. Many who are to-day in lands where the gospel has never come would gladly receive it if it were brought to them. In how much worse case, then, is the one who has heard the gospel and rejected it than the one who has never leard it?

In how much worse case, then, is the one who has heard the gospel and rejected it than the one who has pearls will be the Judge. The day and the Judge are both appointed (Acts xvii, 31), and all believers should, in view of those facts, be preaching repentance to all others, if by all means we may save some (I Cor, ix, 22). Be careful to distinguish between the judgment of living nations when Christ shall come in power and glory to rebuild Zion, and the judgment of living nations when Christ shall come in power and glory to rebuild Zion, and the judgment of their matter. Rich Food for Maine Ducks.

William Mason, who lives a mile from Bluehill village, thinks there may be a gold mine on his farm, and proposes to investigate the matter. Several ducks killed by him have had pieces of gold in their crops, and as they have spent most of their time in a newly deepened pool, the bottom of which is gray sand, it is thought this is where they got their unusually rich food.—Lewiston Journal.

STORY OF A BLACK BASS.

STORY OF A BLACK BASS.

An Interstate Fishing Experience That a New York Artist Once Had.

A few years ago I was spending the summer in Delaware valley. I went out bass fishing one day, accompanied by a local fisherman as guide. Our boat was floating slowly down the stream, when, as we neared a rock in the middle of the river. I had a strike on one of my hooks, and the next second a big bass sprang out of the water at the end of my line. He was well hooked, and began a desperate fight. We floated on past the rock, the bass fighting so that it was necessary to keep the boat going down stream, when suddenly the guide seized the oars and began pulling up stream with all his might.

"Hold on!" I shouted. "Let her

I thought the man was going erazy, t I owdered him to quit rowing, for wanted to kill the big bass. He eyed with a growl, and said that if anstable Van Ray saw us it would be lear bass to me as well as to himself, the meantime the bass was making noble light, and the first thing I iew another bass seized a hook on the ader, and I had two to look out for, he second was a small one, but he ras a fighter, and I had all I could do blandle them, the guide was so stuborn. We had caught a turn in the urrent fifty feet or so below the rock, and the boat floated off toward the rest shore of the river. That was just lee direction that I wanted at that me, but we hadn't gone ten feet beore the guide grabbed the cars again at went to pulling up stream with II his might.

"Drop the coars!" I yelled, madder len and len in the coars again about the rest of the river and built. "Do you want me to lose less fish!"

"But we're in Pennsylvany!" whined lee native. "There hain't no place there it'll go so hard with us for realin' the game laws as it will in ennsylvany, and it'll be three weeks it before you can fish for bass in ennsylvany!"

"Now, we're all right," he said.

where it hain't against the law to catch bass."

The fish were now pretty well played out. I recled them in, but just as they came within reach of the landing net the big one turned and gave a desperate lunge. The leader snapped in two and away went the large fish. The small one was above the break and got him in, but I would have thrown him back again if my guide hadn't just then exclaimed:

"Well, there! That's the first time I ever knew a fish to be hooked in New York state, and fit all the way across New Jersey and Pennsylvany back into New York ag'in! That won't be done ag'in in one while!"

Then I learned for the first time that where I started in fishing was where the three states come together at a point in the river, and I had fought the bass over all three of them. Instead of throwing the little bass away I thought the novelty of his capture warranted me in keeping him, and I had him mounted as a memento of my interestate piscatorial experience.—New York Sun.

A Man's Measurements.

The height of a male at birth is 1 foot 8 inches, and that of a female 1 foot 6 inches, and that of a female 1 foot 6 inches, Fully grown a man's height should be about three and a half times greater than at birth, or 5 feet 9 inches, while a woman should be 5 feet 3 inches. The weight of individuals who are fully developed and well formed, however, varies within extremes, which are nearly as 1 to 2, while their height varies within limits which at most are as 1 to 1-3. Taking 200 pounds as the maximum of man's weight and 85 as the minimum, we would have the average of 142½ pounds. Placing the maximum weight of woman at 185 pounds and the minimum at 70 pounds, and we get an average of 127½ pounds.—Philadelphia Record.

Some Foreign Proverbs.

Here is a Russian proverb that is equal to the keenest satiric vein of a Spaniard: "Before going to war pray once: before going to sea pray twice; before marrying pray three times." I have never been able to understand why the Spanish proverbs bore so heavily on womankind. The Spanish are notoriously a gallant, chivalvic people, yet we find them constantly midulging in such subtle sarcasms as this: "He that loseth a coin and his wife hath a great loss of his coin."—Eugene Field's Letter.

He had further attempted to rival Sir Walter by composing a poem in six cantos, called the "Battle of Cheviot," but he never got beyond 400 lines of this work, as he dropped it to begin another poem, entitled "Olaus the Greet; or, the Conquest of Mona," after the V. Sensational Newspapers.

It is us usually assumed that the soir responsibility for the sensationalism and vulgarity of a portion of the American press rests upon its publishers and conductors. Now, it is a truism to say that there would be less criticism of the conductors. It is us usually assumed that the sole actions of others if every one felt a due responsibility for his own actions. The purveyor of scandal and sensationa news does not merely offer to satisfy an existing demand, but he stimulates and creates an appetite by which he profits. ONCE A YEAR.

MRS. CARCINE E. BURDETT-TAYLOR.

But once a year, my darlings,
Only but once a year,
I long for the dear "old homestead"
I long for the dear "old homestead"
For the loved familiar faces
For the loved familiar faces
That shadden every room,
Have long since left the fireside,
And tien to longer home.

With all her wealth of leaves,
When swallows witter in the barn
And doves coo on the caves;
When swallows witter in the barn
And doves coo on the caves;
When swalling in the wood,
And swaying pine and sturdy oak
Sigh forth their tender mood;
When sunshing allmeners in the shower
When grass-blades cleave the dampened eart
And flutter in the breeze,
Then long I for my chamber
With its window facing cast
With me continual feast!
Ah, me! the wooing tenderness
That ripplied into song
When the special property of the continual feast!
Ah, me! the wooing tenderness
That inplied into song
When the spoiden throated robin,
And the sprightly little lay,
In joy's complete abanding
When the gooden throated robin,
And the sprightly little lay,
In joy's complete abandingly!
Ah, me! the grand rejoicings,
When after patient quest,
When after patient quest,
When after patient quest,
When after patient quest
Of speckled or of blue,
Were warmed beneath the mother breast
Until they wakened too!
Of synaps just poised in trembling
Of sings just poised in trembling
Of sings to the control of their inty chirps
From early morn till night!
Ah, me! 'tis only once a year
I sit me down to dreams,
For the old familiar scenes;
For no home is like my childhood's,
No elins yield such a shade, the superior merits of this lately invented machine. The exhibition was a perfect success, and the "Broncho" made many friends among cyclists here that day. Prof. Barr is the expert of the White Cycle Co. of Boston, and he rode and drove his 2-wheeler up the steepest highway grades in the city—Summer and Myrtle streets; circled the Common; performed feats of daring and agility, and otherwise entertained a big crowd of people. He demonstrated the fact that the "Broncho" is a speeder and easy to drive.

It would puzzle any sane Winchester inhabitant (if one can sane whenever inhabitant (if one case) be found there) to tell exactly what it is proposed to celebrate by that town (not a city) next 4th of July. Winchester had no corporate existence until 1850, but as near as we can find out the proposition is to throw an imaginary line around a lot of territory which will include the present and only Winchester and celebrate the first settlement of the

There isn't a much busier place anywhere in this city than the machine shop of Mesers.

J. T. Freeman & Co., at the old Munroe & Newton rink on Main street, which goes to prove the Journsal's idea true that the manufacture of leather and machinery naturally go hand in hand. It may seem an old thing to say, and we may be soundly abused for saying it, but the fact is, the shoe business and the leather business never "hitch borses," that is to say, they never flourish well in the same locality. But machinery and leather work in the traces together like a charm. What Woburn needs above everything cles is more leather manufacturing establishments and more machine shops, with a first class iron foundry or two thrown in.

The firm of Freeman & Co., are considerable manufacturers of a superior class of Separation of the control of the con or two thrown in.

The firm of Freeman & Co., are considerable manufacturers of a superior class of malt mills and brewery machinery for which they enjoy the best of reputations. Their malt mills will grid 1000 bushels an hour when under full speed, and Hon. Frank Jones of Portsmouth, for whom the firm have lately put in two, speaks very highly of them. Elbridge, another extensive Portsmouth brewer, is having one of the mills built and put in by Freeman & Co., and the demand for them is rapidly increasing. There is no concern anywhere about that makes more or better tannery machinery than Freeman & Co. They make a specialty of splitting machines and jacks of all kinds, being fully supplied with all the necessary appliances for that kind of a mechanical product. Orders for these come from the New York State tanneries as well as from those in New England and the Middle States, to supply which and to promptly respond to calls for general jobbing 15 of the best skilled machinists are constantly employed and sometimes many more.

The firm have lately put a 150 H. P. engine into the large leather factory of William Tidd & Co., of Stoneham, and fitted their establishment up with a good deal of new machinery. They have just secured the contract for building a big elevator at Providence, R. I., and orders for their work come in from all quarters almost daily.

Freeman & Co. are practicn machinists and enterprising men. They employ only the very best help, and the result is, whatever they do is thoroughly well done. For

Mr. Bailey, in behalf of himself and wife, to both of whom this was manifestly an entire surprise, very happily responded with much evident feeling, heartily thanking the company for the substantial evidences of their good will, and their many good wishes, and bearing cheerful testimony to the uniform kindness and consideration with which they had ever been treated by all the Woburn people during their two years residence among them.

Mr. Samuel. Sewail has been appointed census camerator for Burlington.

On Thursday afternoon, May 22, the Ladies Benevolent Society celebrated their "Golden Wedding," or fittieth anniversary, in the church parlor. At 3 o'clock, Mrs. Mary B. Reed, who has been the efficient and beloved President of the Society for thirty-nine years, with the other officers of the Society, held a reception.

A large number of friends were present, including officers of similar societies in Winchester and North Woburn. At four o'clock supper was served. The tables were well spread with good things and beautifully adorned with flowers. At the plate of each was a souvenir card, bearing an extract from the Secretary's records and each giving a glimpse from one year's work of the society. These were read in turn by the members. One of the fourteen members who joined at the first meeting was present. Four others are living but not being residents of the town, were not able to be there. At the close of her response, Mrs. Curtis presented Mrs. Reed in behalf of the Society with a beautiful antique oak writing desk, marked with a silver plate, suitably inscribed. Mrs. Reed was completely surprised but responded with fitting words of thanks. The Secretary and Treasurer also received beautiful books as tokens of the gratitude of the Society. The total amount of money given by the Society in forty-two of money given by the Society in forty-two years is very large considering the Society has only had an average of fourteen mem-bers during that time. The success of the occasion was largely due to the efforts of the Pastor, Rev. C. H. Washburn.

Last Sunday morning, a Memorial Service was held, at the church. The platform was appropriately decorated with flags, guns, and floral tributes. On the desk, lay the sword, which Mr. G. L. Tebbetts carried in the war. The Ward B. Frothingham Post, G. A. R., of Burlington, G. L. Tebbetts, Commander, was present.

Mrs. M. A. E. Gleason of the W. C. T U. of Massachusetts gave an able and inter esting address at the church, Sunday even mit Verses 33-35-Golden Text, Lev. xix. 18-Commentary by Rev. D. M. Stearns

[Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly by permission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadel-messon of H.S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadel-phin J.

All that is recorded between the sending forth of the seventy and the events of to-day's lesson is found in the intervening verses of this chapter. Note the power over all the power of the enemy granted to the seventy, with the promise that nothing should by any means hurt them (v, 10, also the greatness of having our names written in Heaven (v, 20, and the blessedness of having a child like spirit.

having our names written in Heaven (v, 20), and the blesschress of having a child like spirit.

25. "And behold, a certain lawyer stood up and tempted Him." The word signifies to try or prove, and Jesus was tried, or proved, or tempted, first by the devil himself in the wilderness, then all through His public ministry He was continually tried by scribes and Pharisees and Sadducees, and also by His own followers, but he never failed. He was in all points tempted like as we are yet without sin. Having thus suffered He is able to succor them that are tempted. We are to count it a great privilege to be thus tried, because thus we have fellowship with Him; knowing that we shall not have more than we can bear, and it all adds just so much to our glory at His coming (Heb. iv, 15; ii, 18; James 1, 2, 12; I Cor. x, 13; I Peter iv, 12, 13). "Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal 18; James I, 2, 12; I Cor. x, 13; I Peter iv, 12, 13).

"Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life?" The same question was asked by the rich young ruler (Chap, xviii, 18), and virtually the same on another occasion (John vi, 28). The answer in each case was given to snit those who asked and to meet their need. The mistake of each was the same that prevails at all times, viz, that eternal life can be obtained by some doing on our part. It is the mistake of all who are wise and prudent in their own eyes. How much can a babe do to help itself! Try and think of a single thing. It must be caref for or perish. Just so with the sinner. We have no more power to do anything that will save ourselves than a habe has to care for itself. Utterly helpless is our condition, but we know it not, and it is hard to convince us.

less is our condition, but we know it no, ame it is hard to convince us.

20. "He said unto him, What is written in the law! how readest thou?" Being a law-yer, he was supposed to know the law, and to that Jesus refers him. The law is sometimes a general name for the books of Moses and sometimes signifies the ten commandments, or the larger law concerning all rites and ceremonies. The law, the prophets and the salwist her Saviour's summary of all Scriptceremonies. The law, the prophets and the psalms is the Saviour's summary of all Scripture (Ialke xxiv, 27, 49). Is there anything concerning which you would like to ask Jesus a question! See here what He would probably say to you, "What is written! how readest thou!" If you would have to reply, "I do not know, Lord, for I have not read the Bible carefully," then begin quickly to read much and carefully, so that you may know what is written. Otherwise those who never saw a Bible may rise against you in the judgment.

know what is written. Otherwise those who never saw a Bible may rise against you in the judgment.

27, "And he answering said: Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart,

* • • and thy neighbor as thyself." He was perhaps more ready with an answer than many of us would have been.

28. "And He said unto him, Thou hast answered right; this do, and thou shalt live." The keeping of the law which God requires was explained by the Saviour in His sermon on the mount, when He taught that hatred in the heart was equal to murder, and a lustful look equal to adultery. Let any one stand forth able to say truly that he has kept the whole law in thought, word and deed, the same would be a righteous man, having life, needing no Saviour. But such an one never lived, for "all have simed and come short of the glory of God," and "therefore by the deeds of the law there shall no flesh be justified in His sight."

20. "But he, willing (R. V. desiring) to justified.

deeds of the law there shall no flesh be justified in His sight."

29. "But the, willing (R. V. desiring) to justified in His sight."

29. "But the, willing (R. V. desiring) to justify himself, said unto Jesus, And who is meighbor." The sinner, convinced of his sin, is ready to condemn himself, plead guilty and humbly seek forgiveness. But this man was not convicted of sin; he was not truly seeking life; he was against Christ, and was seeking to catch Him in his words, that he might condemn Him; therefore he asks this question, not because he really wanted to know, but simply to try the Saviour still further. Jesus knew the man's heart and his motives and his sin, yet He patiently hears him and say have the same suffering even with those who hat Him and seek his life.

30. "And Jesus answering said, A certain man went down from Jerusalem to Jericho." As He had drawn from the lawyer the answer to his first question, so He will draw from him the answer to His second and send him away confounded.

31. "And by chance a certain priest was going down that way" (R. V.) There were lots of them on the downward road in the Saviour's time of humiliation, and there are plenty still traveling in the same way, even though called priests.
"And when he saw him, he passed by on illed priests.

"And when he saw him, he passed by on the other side." And yet a priest was supsed to live nearer to God than any one else at have more of the Spirit of God.

32. "And in like manner a Levite also, hen he came to the place, and saw him, used by on the other side." Here is another est religious person, next in standing to the riests.

"He took care of him." His loving care is seen in a seven hued rainbow of blessing and mercy.

30. "Which now of these three, thinkest thou, was neighbor unto him that fell among the thieves!" Jesus has put the matter clearly before him, and now he is to answer his own question as to "Who is my neighbor!" One's neighbor is not always the one who lives next door or across the street, but the one who acts neighbor! Not words but deeds prove the reality of love or friendship. "Not every one that saith, * * * but he that doeth."

37. "And he said, He that showed mercy on him." He has answered his own question, and perhaps this time been compelled to condemn himself, for He who reads the heart had doubtless read him a personal lesson.

"Then said Jesus unto him, Go and do thou likewise." The Saviour knew his man, he saw the hard, impenitent heart, and by bringing him face to face with God's holy law and the spirit of it, He would fain humble him and convince him of sin that he might be saved. Wearing Crape.

Somebody says that the custom when a household goes into mourning of putting a crape band on the arms of the servants is another instance of the adoption of everything English. Now, this is absolutely untrue. The mourning band on the arm had been in use in the southern states long before George Washington was ever heard of, and down in Dixie the gentlemen of a family also wear the crape badge for three months, six months, or twelve months, according to the length of time deep mourning is worn by the ladies of the household.—New York Sun.

THE CONDUCTOR'S WAY. He Tells How the Passengers Them Help Him to Do His Work.

Disregarded Bullet Wounds.

The Sultan's Cooks.

An Artist Against His Will. Help lim to De His Work.

"Well, come into the baggage car, Johnny," said the old conductor. "If I am to break you in, I might as well tell you the secrets of the conductor's business. They are few and simple, but they are powerful. A conductor relies on nothing in himself or his authority. His uniform and lantern and punch don't amount to anything. He is able to do business simply because of the consciences of the people in the cars. Take away conscience from the human race, and we could not handle more than one car load. There would have to be a conductor for each car.

"Of course, you have to stir the people's conscience. You will notice that as I walk through a car I throw my hand to one side and the other, towards every passenger in the seats. Now, if a man or woman has a ticket for me, that simple motion forces that passenger to give the ticket up. They may mean to keep it, may have planned not to give it up, but as I turn my hand towards them and say, Tickets on at Newark, please, they can no more help giving up the ticket than they can always presume I know all about it.

"A conductor is often surprised by having a ticket thrust at him when he does not expect it, but here's a curious fact: A conductor's surprise does not count in the business. When a conductor shows he did not expect a ticket, it is too late for the passenger to with draw it. But a passenger's emotions are of the utmost importance to a conductor shows he did not expect a ticket, it is too late for the passenger to with draw it. An Artist Against His Will.

The walls of the former palace of the bey of Constantine are adorned with extraordinary frescoes of the rudest and most inartistic designs. The story of their origin is curious enough. Ahmed, the last bey of Ksentina (Constantine) was anxious to have the walls of his palace decorated with oil paintings, but notwithstanding the most diligent search in the city and neighborhood, no native artist could be found who was capable of carrying out his wishes. In this dilemma it occurred to him to intrust the execution of this difficult task to a French prisoner, a shoemaker by trade, who was employed as a slave in the palace. He promised to restore him to liberty.

The poor wretch, who knew well how to ply the awl and the "was ned," but had not the faintest notion how to mix colors or handle a brush, humbly and piteously declared over and over again that he was utterly unworthy of the great honor. It availed him nothing, for the bey exclaimed: "All Frangi (Frenchmen) can paint so I am told; get to work this instant or I will have your head lopped off!" for and artembling our new fledged artist took up the brush and paint pot, and spurred on by mortal terror his laboring fancy produced those truly wonderful frescoes. With anxions expectation he now waited to hear what his master would say to his performance. The bey came, he saw and approved. "This fellow wanted to decive me," he said, "but I knew that all Frangi were lurs." And true to his word, he set the honest cobbler free—Ueber Land und Meer.

The Magnificence of Berlin.

Berlin is today one of the most splendid capitals of Europe, hardly surpassed even by Paris in grandeur, and, with its population of 1,500,000, is the second city of the continent in size and the first in industrial rank. It is growing with the pace of a Chicago, and every year beholds enormous areas of the surrounding sand plains covered densely with the new houses of the expanding city.

The principal streets of Berlin are nearly all paved with asphalt, and they are such marvels of cleanliness and smoothness that one feels the same respect for them as for a nice drawing room, and scruples to litter them even with a scrap of paper. The most frequented ones are literally washed and scrubbed every night. After being wet down a few men or boys proceed along the road, pushing before them pieces of board set diagonally on a pole, with a strip of rubber on the lower side. The mud is thus transferred from the course of one man to another and finally left in the gutter, whence it is removed. The consequent freedon of the city from dust is very marked.—Cor. Mexican Financier.

A Point for Chronologists.

help.

"Just walk along behind me for a couple of days. You will at first be surprised at the number of men that you will see are trying to beat me, but you will be more astonished at the various ways in which they are certain to betray themselves."—P. R. R. in Chatter. "Do you notice," queries a reader of The Breakfast Table, "how prevalent the idea is, even among newspaper men, that we are in the last decade of nee total is, even among newspaper neen, that we are in the last decade of the century?"

It is a common error to which the zorrespondent alludes, but a moment's thought cannot fail to set one right. From the opening of the Christian era to the year 10 certainly formed the the first decade of modern chronology, and the second decade began with the year 11. The First century ended with the close of the year 100, and the Second century began with the opening of the year 101. So the Nineteenth century began with January 1, 1801, and will close with December 31, 1900. The last decade of the Nineteenth curry will not begin, then, until January 1, 1891. Nevertheless, people for the rest of this year will insist that we have entered upon the last decade of the century.—Boston Advertiser. Disregarded Bullet Wounds.

It has occurred to no obituary writer to notice Lord Napier of Magdala's utter indifference to wounds and the wonderful celerity of his recovery from them. Two of his wounds he had not cared to notice at all in his record of services furnished to Hart's army list. He was severely wounded at Ferozeshah in December, 1843, but had recovered in time to take part in the battle of Sobraon, seven weeks later. Before Multan, in the middle of September, 1848, a cannon shot all but took off his leg, but he was marching and fighting again by the second week in November.

On the 12th of January following he was severely wounded in the trenches,

For Baggy Trousers.

Ever since it was discovered that it took nine tailors to make a man, the knights of the shears have puzzled their brains to find a remedy for trousers bagging at the knees. Countless appliances have been used, but none of them seem to fill the bill, and a fortune awaits the tailor who invents something practicable in this line. It has been reserved for a New York dirm, however, to partly remedy this evil, and that is to press the trousers of their customers, say once a week. Messengers are sent around to the houses of the patrons of the firm, and the trousers are taken to the store and pressed for $10 a year. This makes a very moderate outlay for considerable improvement in the appearance of a man, and it may prove to be the solution of the vexed problem.—New York Times. On the 12th of January following he was severely wounded in the trenches, but he was able to march several hundred miles across the country and fight at Gujerat one month later to a day. He was shot in the leg at the first relief of Lucknow, but nevertheless rode out next day and brought in the rear guard, after which throughout the blockade he did continuous and arduous service. At the second relief he was severely wounded, but this did not hinder him from taking up the active duty of chief engineer at the Alum bagh a few days later. — London World.

33. "But a certain Samaritan, as he journeyd, came where he was: and when he saw him, he had compassion on him." Here is neither a Priest nor a Levite, not even a Scribe or a Pharise, but only a Samaritan whom all the Jews despised. Type of Jesus Himself treated by His Own as a stranger and an outcast, desphased and rejected by them, who hated Him without a cause, He had compassion. He would cheerfully have forgiven them and saved them, but in their own estimation they were the rightcous people, and did not need Him.

Egyptian Stockings.

The Egyptians of the present—
Kopts as well as Arabs—run about with bare feet. The ancient Egyptians, on the contrary, who are now only to be seen in a dried condition in museums, possessed a very good method of knitting stockings, as is shown in the collection at the Louvre, in Paris. In the grave of a mummy there was found a pair of knitted stockings, which gave the surprising evidence, firstly, that short stockings, resembling socks, were worn by the ancient Egyptians; and secondly, that the art of knitting stockings had already attained great perfection in ancient Egypt.—New York Ledger.

The Beauty of Death.

One friend of mine, a beautiful young woman, was afflicted with an eruption upon the hands. This was not only exceedingly painful but very mortifying. Her own family physician, a man of common sense as well as of scientific attainment, prescribed certain blood remedies, but refused to give her anything to act upon the condition—in other words declined to doctor symptoms.

The patient became irritable and dissatisfied, and finally consulted a newly fledged M. D., who, through some advertising dodge, had been brought prominently before the public. She returned to her home with pellets of arsenic to be taken during the day and an arsenical lotion to be used morning and night, and a piece of advice. This was not to notice any criticism of the treatment, and to say to those who condemned arsenic that such an objection was only an old woman's whim which medical science had satisfactorily disposed of. A permanent cure was guaranteed in six weeks. At the end of that time my friend's hands were as white and as smooth as an infant's, but my friend was in the agonies of death. The eruption had been driven inward instead of out of the system, and quick consumption was the result.—Cor, Atlanta Constitution.

New Rental Method.

A New York lawsuit disclosed a novel and ingenious kind of business, invented, it is said, by Jared Flagg, Jr. The operator buys a house for $20,000, paying $500 down and giving a mortgage for the remainder. It is rather handsomely furnished on the installment plan, at a cost of $6,000, of which but one installment of $250 is paid. The house is then rented to a tenant, who lets furnished rooms or keeps a boarding house, at a rent of $00 to $90 a week, with an agreement that at the end of five years the furniture shall become the property of the boarding house keeper. This prospect seems very fascinating to widows who have a small estate, or others who have saved up their wages until they have a goodly bank account, which they usually lose in this singular speculation. The operator receives from $3,000 to $4,000 a year, out of which he pays $600 for interest and taxes and $1,400 on installment, leaving a clear profit of $1,000 upon the operation. The cruel feature of the business is that after a hard working woman makes a week's default the operator dispossesses her forthwith and gets a new customer.—New York Star.

A Kind Hearted Employer.

The late Franklin B. Gowen was very generous, and did many little deeds of kindness in such a quiet way that very few ever heard of them. One of his employes who had lost his wife, and in consequence of her long illness was very short of money, went to him and asked permission for a few days' absence, after explaining his misfortune, and also requested a pass. Mr. Gowen cheerfully complied with the request, sympathizing kindly with him.

London always figures in the weekly reports of the registrar general as a very healthy city. Dr. Williams-Freeman, however, seems to think that London has obtained a fictitious reputation for healthlness by reason of the large proportion—37 per cent.—of the population which is country born, and by the constant removals to the country of persons whose health has broken down under the stress of metropolitan life.—London Tit-Bits.

Water is put in the bottom of the pan and the bread or meat is placed on a shelf above the water or not. When put into the oven with temperature about 285 degrees f. The water is changed into steam of a higher temperature than in open boiling, cooking with results which are very satisfactory, for the whole nutriment is retained and the product is very directible. The natural American gas wells are a great wonder and curiosity to Europeans. Were Count Rumford here he would be alive to them as he would to gas stoves which go with them when in Newcastle, last summer, that a piece of coal was placed in Nov., 1888, to see how long gas would come off from it, and it was still coming off in Aug. 1889! There is a good economy in gas stoves, as they can be lighted only during use and there is no loss by smoke, which is made of partially consumed fuel. For broiling when the flame is above the meat or fish, they are perhaps the most perfect arrangement for this kind of cooking, which is done by radiation with free ventilation and no danger of burning nor of drips falling on the flame and filling the apartment with the smell of burnt fat acids. I think Count Rumford would award prizes to the oil and gas stoves of our day as well as to COUNT RUMFORD'S MEDALS.

For improvement in heat and light. There is a large sum accumulated for this purpose unused which I think should be applied, in recognition not only of the appliances already named, but (what we have in America) of the the largest telescopes and the highest microscope objectives that have done work. It seems to me that Alvan Clark, Tolles, Spencer and others might have had a Rumford award, and if there is obstruction due to the change in the times, there should be an enabling act of the Legislature to allow the trust conform to the times and thus have Count Rumford's desires consummated.

WIII.

His treatment of cooking showed a broad and expansive mind of practical trend. As cooking is part of ethics in all times and places, and touches all mankind, it is difficult to conceive of a broader earthly subject. When exerted beneficially few efforts have a prospect of greater good to all conceived in the times and the change in the times, there should be an enabling act of the Legislature to allow the trust conform to the times and thus have Count Rumford's desires consummated. Count Rumford's desires consummated.

Had he removed the filter and put in its place a cotton bag, he would then have made the desired improvement, which is being used to-day in the 'wbester' and the 'wbess.' If people would follow the Rumford device they would always have good coffee. The more caffeine, and its power of rehabilitating after fatigue, and allaying the evolution, but devolution.

The Washington mongers of news, real and artificial, assured the public more than three months ago that First Assistant Postmaster General Clarkson would resign at the close of his first year of service. He did not however, whereupon they declared that he was liable to do so at any moment. A week or two ago the country were in-formed that Mr. Clarkson's resignation was certainly in the hands of the President and several names were published from which his successor would proba-

Now we have it from Mr. Clarkson's Now we have it from Mr. Clarkson's nown lips that he has never contemplated any such thing as resigning and no one was ever justified in making such a statement to the public. He proposes to see the present Administration clear through to the end of it and to have matters in the Postoffice Department run on business principles, especially that branch of it which relates to the incumbency of fourth class offices. It is no doubt true that there are

Republicans who like to see things done in a practical way, who believe in business methods for the government as well as individuals, who see through and despise the hypocracy of the "reform" cries of the times—Republicans of sense, honesty and understanding—like Secretary Clarkson's ways of dealing with the public patronage, they cor-dially endorse his methods, and uphold daily endorse his methods, and uphold him in the vigorous use which he makes of the official axe. These men will be glad to learn that he is going to stick, for it means that there is to be no peace for the wicked until every Democratic for the wicked until every Democratic 4th class postmaster has been furnished his ticket-of-leave.

For a long time the Meigs Company, with General B. F. Now, however, the Legislature has fully recognized the rights of the Company, listened to their appeals for justice, and complied with their demands for the privilege to construct elevated railroads in this Common-wealth—in brief, placed them on an equal footing with the West End Company, which means that the day is not very far distant when Boston and its suburbs will enjoy the blessings of elevated roads and rapid transit at the cheapest kind of rates.

There is considerable talk about town concerning High School millitary affairs, more especially as to who Drill-Master Fox's successor is to be this year. A feeling that a home production should be given the preference is growing and the general belief is that when the time for making the appointment arrives it will be too strong for our School Board to resist. We hear that it is worrying the gentlemen Committeemen already, for which reason the appointment is likely to be made somewhat earlier this year than usual.

mission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadelphia mission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadelphia At that is recorded between the Jest lesson and this one is the most interesting and in-structive incident of Jesus in the house of Martha (chap. x, 38-42). I have no doubt but that both women were true disciples of Jesus (see John xi, 5, 25) and that Mary was as willing to do housework as Martha; but the attitude of soul which Jesus commends in Mary, and which was lacking in Martha, was the greater interest in the things unseen than in the things of this life. Mary was increas-ing in riches which she would never lose; while Martha, though just as safe as Mary, was more careful about the many things of this life which sooner or later must all be left behind.

1. "And it came to pass, that as He was praying in a certain place." Luke records more instances of the Saviour's praying than either of the others. In Luke alone do we find that He prayed at His baptism, at His transfiguration, after He cleansed the leper, and before He chose the twelve (iii, 21; ix, 29; v, 10; vi, 12, 13). The incident of our lesson also is found only in Luke. If we were more intimate with our Father in Heaven, we would more often be found in communion with Him; the earth would be a more lonely would more often be found in communion with Him; the earth would be a more lonely place to us, and we would have more heart craving for Christ himself.

"Lord, teach us to pray, as John also taught his disciples." In the sermon on the mount Jesus had aircady taught how to pray (Matt. vi, 9-13), but as it was after that the twelve were chosen, it is probable that the disciple who asked this question was not present at that time.

Heaven one, and Out Father which are Heaven one.

"Hallowed be Thy Name," In His last prayer with His disciples Jesus said to His Father, "I have endered the them Thy Name," At another time he prayed, "Father, glorify Thy Name," John xvii, 6, 26; xii, 29.

"Thy kingdom come," The God of Heaven shall set up a kingdom which shall break in pieces and consume all the kingdoms of this world and it shell stand forever.

"Thy kingdom come," The God of Heaven shall set up a kingdom which shall break in pieces and consume all the kingdoms of this world and it shall stand forever.

"Thy will be done, as in Heaven, so in earth," When this petition shall have been manifestly answered, then the kingdom shall have come. But until God's will is done on earth as it is in Heaven let no one say that the kingdom has come. In proportion as we now delight to do His will we shall individually have a foretaste of the kingdom in our hearts and lives.

3. "Give us day by day our daily bread." Statemance for body and soul as each day shall require; but one day at a time. "Adally rate for every day all the days of his life" was what a certain king gave to one who was his captive (H Ki. xxv., 30.5 ins; for we also forgive every one that is indebted to us." When He taught them this prayer in the serion on the mount, He added: "If ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses."

"And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from ewil." God did tempt, or try, or prove Abraham; and Jagessays, "Blessed is the man that endureth temptation," but to also aids, "God cannot be compted with evil, neither tempteth He any man" (Gen. xxi). Jas. i, 12-15). Temptations, in the sense of trials, are our greatest blessings (Jas. i, 2: 1 Pet. iv, 12, 13; and God is faithful who will not suffer us to be tempted above that we are able (Cor. x, 12). Perhaps the best explanation of this petition will be found in the light of Matt, iv, 1, "Then was Jesus led up of the Spirit into the wilderness, to be tempted of the devil," and in the fact that He, knowing what it means, would as far as possible spare us.

5-7. "Friend, lend me three loaves; for a friend of mine in his journey is come to me, and I have nothing to set before him." Jesus

He, knowing what it means, would as far as possible spare us.

5:7. "Friend, lend me three loaves; for a friend of mine in his journey is come to me, and I have nothing to set before him." Jesus now uses the illustration of a friend coming to a friend, on behalf of another friend, and at a very unseasonable hour, but with a very urgent request; and the request is denied, for the man of whom the request is denied, for the man of whom the request is denied, for the man of whom the request is in made thinks more of the comfort of his children, who are in bed with him, than of the need.

8. "Because of his importunity he will rise and give him as many as he needeth." The word for importunity is used only this once in the Bible, and signifies literally "shamelessness" or "impudence" or "rough earnestness." Here is an earnestness, not very seemly, but which accomplishes its end, even at the expense of the children's comfort. He seems to teach us that there is a taking hold of God in prayer as Jacob did when in his helplessness he clung to the angel, saying, "I will not let thee go, except thou bless me."

9. "And I say unto you, Ask and it shall be given you." "All things whatsoever ye shall receive." "Whatsoever ye shall ask in my name, that will I do, that the Father may be glorified in the Son. If ye shall ask anything in my name, that will I do, that the Father may be glorified in the Son. If ye shall ask anything in my name, that will I do, that the Father may be glorified in the Son. If ye shall ask anything in my name, that will I do, that the Father may be glorified in the Son. If ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you" (Matt. xxi, 22; John xiv, 13, 14; xv, 7). These are a few of the many plain, emphatic word of our Lord upon asking and receiving, but who believes them! Who thus asks and receives? "Seek and ye shall find." "Ye shall seech from my mind. The shall be opened unto you." "In Christ is redemption" in all its fullness, and "in Him are hid all the treasures of wisher of the many spe any individual that will let him in, that He may sup with thome that asketh receiveth, "etc. An the those promises and statements and the those promises and statements and the statements and the statements and the statements and the statements are the statements are the statements and the statements are the statemen

He Fiddled and They Fit.

A Mill Creek miner thus winds up the story of a fight between 1,000 wolves that beseiged his cabin one night recently in the mountains of that region, incited to frenzy by the notes of the aforesaid miner's fiddle:

"If fiddled and they fit and ate each other, till the band began to thin out. Every time I gave an extra rasp on the E string they howled louder and pitched in afresh. They kept it up for three hours, when there wasn't more than forty or fifty left, and they so blamed full that they could hardly waddle. But I fiddled and they fit for a second wind. When one threw up the sponge the others bolted him in a twinkling. By and by there wasn't more than a dozen left. But I fiddled and they fit and feasted.

"When they got down to three, each one laid hold of another's tail and chawed for glory. The ring kept getting smaller, but I fiddled and they chaved until there was only a bunch of hair left, and that blowed away down hill. The snow was all red with blood and trampled down ten feet. Heads and bones were strung all down the canyon, and there was fur enough in sight to stuff a circus tent. It was the dandiest dog fight I ever saw."—Virginia City Chronicle.

Connecticut Trout Streams.

Judge John W. Webster, who is widely known in Connecticut as an expert fisherman, takes an encouraging view of the condition of the trout streams there. He says: "In many places you can now find ten trout where ten years ago you could get but one. The improved and improving condition of Connecticut fishing is due to a generous restocking of the streams in all sections of the state. The fish commissioners are doing a splendid work."—Philadelphia Ledger. Connecticut Trout Streams.

Plowers of Europe.

Of the 4,200 kinds of flowers which grow in Europe only 420, or 10 per cent, are odorferous. The commonset flowers are the white ones, of which there are 1,194 kinds. Less than one-fifth of these are fragrant. Of the 951 kinds of yellow flowers 77 are odorfferous; of the 823 red kinds, 84; of the 594 blue kinds, 31; of the 308 violet blue kinds, 13; of the 240 kinds with combined colors 28 are fragrant.—Exchange.

Resistance in the Air.

Experiments have demonstrated that the relation between the velocity of a projectile and the resistance offered by the air to its motion differs materially from Newton's theory that the resistance is proportional to the square of the velocity. For velocities which are nearly equal to that of sound in the air the proportionate increase of the resistance is much greater than that of the velocity.—New York Journal.

Dressmakers Must Beware.

Here is a warning to dressmakers. A young woman in Bergerac, France, sent a dress to a mode, but forgot to remove from its pocket a very confidential letter. The latter, instead of returning it, communicated its contents to several neighboring gossips. The girl's guardian has obtained a verdict, compeiling the dressmaker to return the letter and pay $60 damages and the costs.—New York World.

Reading Before Retiring.

It is wise at night to read, but for a few minutes, some books which will compose and soothe the mind; which will bring us face to face with the true facts of life, death and eternity; which will make us remember that man doth not live by bread alone; which will give us, before we sleep, a few thoughts worthy of a Christian man with an immortal soul in him.—Canon Kingsley.

No other government except that of France has given an order for the smokeless powder invented some time ago. Military men of the hignest standing claim that the smoke of a battle field saves hundreds of lives, and that smoke is as much to a battle as bugles and drums.—Detroit Free Press.

The Reason Why.

GREAT CARE OF GUACHARO.

A subterranean Recess in South America.

That Has Not Been Fully Explored.

Among the many subterranean recesses which are met with in different parts of the world few are more remarkable, and few less known generally, than the cave of Guacharo, in the republic of Venezuela, in South America. Indeed, until Humboldt published his masterly delineation of this quarter of the globe Europeans were ignorant of its existence, although it had been long known to the Spanish missionaries, and was for generations a place of awe and terror to the natives. It is situated near the picturesque and delightful valley of Caripe, which lies to the west of the Gulf of Paria, in about 10 degs. of north latitude.

Gulf of Paria, in about 10 degs, of north latitude.

In a country where a love of the marvelous is a prominent feature of the mental character a cavern whose unexplored recesses give birth to a river, and which is inhabited by myriads of nocturnal birds, whose terrible cries awaken all the echoes of the dreary subterranean, is, of course, a never failing subject of conversation, and the attention of Humboldt was very soon drawn to it.

The cavern continues to wind in the same direction, to be of the same breadth and to retain its original height of about 70 feet for a distance of 1,450 feet, beyond which it begins to contract in its dimensions. Throughout its length flows a stream of water, in some places 39 feet in breadth and 2 feet in depth, but from what source this subterranean river comes no one as yet has been able to tell, as the roughness of the cavern and various impediments prevent the progress of explorers beyond a certain point. On issuing from the mouth of the cave, and running a few leagues, the stream joins the River Santa Maria, whose waters ultimately fall into the Gulf of Paria.

Humboldt was astonished to find the cavern abounding in vegetation considerably beyond the distance which the sun's light penetrated. It appears that seeds which are carried into the cave by the old birds to feed their young spring up wherever they can lix themselves in the mold that covers the calcareous incrustations. Blanched stalks, with some half formed leaves, were found to have attained the height were found to have attained the height of two feet. It is well known that when light is excluded from plants they become pale and disfigured, of which an instance on a grand scale was here afforded. In advancing, the vault gradually began to contract in height, and, in proportion as it became lower, the cries of the guacharces sounded more shrill and piercing. The Indians at last refused to proceed any further, and Humboldt was compelled to retrace his steps to the free air and the light of day. He found that a bishop had penetrated much further than he, having measured nearly 2,500 feet from the mouth to the spot where he stopped, although the cavern, to all appearance, extended a great deal deeper.—New York Ledger.

Stage Fright.

Talking of stage fright and of a young orator's nervousness while addressing his first works to a public audience, a popular speaker said: "There is no moral or medical method that I know of for overcoming that awful thumping of the heart which comes suddenly upon an untried and even many a practiced speaker. It ruins the dinner—until the ordeal is over—of many a greatman down on the bills for a speech, and at times is so violent that only a strong physical effort will enable a man to retain even an appearance of calmness. It is said there is a preparation which, if sniffed before speaking time comes, will retard the action of the heart. But I know of nothing effectual."—Interview in Chicago Herald.

Bells Were Invented in 400.

Bells Were Invented in 400.

The invention of bells is attributed to Paulinus, bishop of Nola, in Campania, about 400. They were first used in churches as a defense against thunder and lightning. They were first hung in England, at Croyland abbey, in 945. In the Eleventh century and later it was the custom to baptize them in churches before they were used. The curfew bell was established in 1068 and discontinued in 1100. Bellmen were appointed in London in 1556 to ring the bells at night and cry, "Take care of your fire and candle, be charitable to the poor and pray for the dead."

A Washington street man who controls a cafe has done a good thing for the street gamins. But did you ever hear of an engineer whose ears deceived him? I have. An engineer is always expecting to hear the sound of a whistle. He listens so much for this sound that, after years at the throttle, he will hear the sound of which I speak when there is none. In some instances the company has had the ears of engineers put to a test by eminent auriculists. In fact, I have been told that some companies have men employed who make an examination of the ears of engineers after the engineers have been on the road a certain length of time.—Interview in Chicago Tribune.

Fainting the Face in Ovid's Day.

Painting the Face in Ovid's Day.

The poet Ovid describes various paints which were used by the Roman matrons, and complained that the woman tried to imitate with cosmeties the rosy complexions which health alone could give. He also spoke of the deceifful pallor lent to their cheeks by white lead, and of curious methods they had of beautifying their eyes.

Again, he mentions that a pale face was a necessity for every woman who aspired to be "good form." Pliny speaks of a concection of flour of peas and barley, eggs, hartshorn, etc., which fashionable women in Rome wore on their faces all night and part of the day for the purpose of clearing their skins.—Berlin Courier.

The Smell of Books.

One of the assistants at the British museum tells me that visitors to that institution frequently have a hard time getting "acclimated" to the place. An hour spent in the rooms invariably gives the visitor (for the first time) a headache. Sometimes it is only after repeated visits that one is able to indulge his researches without carrying away a headache with him. Women seem to be particularly sensitive to this curious malady, which is said to arise from the peculiar odor created by the curious malady, which is said to arise from the peculiar odos created by the storage of so many books. You can get some idea of what this odor is by going to your book case, that has been closed for twenty-four hours, and open-ing one of the doors; immediately your offactories will be greeted by the mustiest fragrance imaginable.—Eu-gene Field's London Letter.

The phrase to "cut and run" originated from a peculiar custom of the ancient Egyptian embalmers. A low caste official was employed to make the first incision in the corpse, a process viewed with much superstition and hatred by the people, who held all mutilators of the dead as being accursed. As soon as the incisor made his "cut" he took to his heels, pursued by sticks, stones and curses. For his living the poor wretch "cut," and to save his life he had to "run,"—St. Louis Republic.

A WILD RIDE.

"Say, driver, will your horses scare?"

The driver as well as the rest looked who were sipping various kinds of liquids, smoking cigars and pipes and telling stories. One of them was a swarthy man of some 35 years of age, who sat with his feet, in huge miner's hoots, resting on an adjoining table.

"Say, driver, will your horses albyss yawned beneath me like the ravenue albys yawned beneath me like the ravenue albyss yawned beneath me like the ravenue albys yawned beneath me like the yawned beneath me like the ravenue albys yawned beneath me like albys yawned beneath me like the late was albys yawned benea

There was a sudden cessation of the grinding noise on the brake the heavy coach plunged forward like an avalanche, there was a fierce confusion, a clatter of whiffle-trees as the stage appeared about to roll over the horses, and then came the conviction, like a bilinding flash, that the brakes had given away!

"God in heaven! Jump!" was shrieked by some one behind me. Then I rose to my feet as I waited for the driver to detach the plunging mass of horses from the stage, and stood ready to spring when the way was clear. For the millionth part of a second my attention was distracted by cries from the passengers within the coach, who were howling and shricking like madmen, and then I recalled my own dauger as I clung with difficulty to the seat and braced myself for the leap the moment opportunity offered.

To be sure, it is generally understood that everyone of the School Committee whose term expires this year wants a re-election, and if there is a Councilman or Alderman who don't want the same thing his name has not been made oublic, and it is barely possible that Mr. Carter's supposed wishes may have been taken into account in finding the "Geographical Centre" of Ward 2.

| The school census of this town pans out well this year. It shows that as a community we are making progress towards a city. Chief Richardson makes the following figures which look well in cold type. There are 900 children between the ages of 5 and 15 agents, as follows: 5 years, 100; 6, 96; 7, 101; 8, 87; 9, 80; 10, 103; 11, 75; 12, 93; 13, 68; 14, 97. In last year's report there were 840 names, of this number 75 were over 15 years, 47 left town, 2 died, leaving a balance of 716 and adding 184 new names, making a total of 900.

names, making a total of 900.

There can be no doubt about it at all but that we are going to beat the record on celebrations here next 4th of July. Everything's loaded for b'ar and if nothing happens the celebration of the first settlement of this neck of timber by white folks will be a gallbuster. The committees are at it teeth and toenail and nothing will be left undone by them to eclipse anything in the line ever seen in Middlesex county. There will be dead loads of 4th-of-July lemonade and gingerbread. I mention this fact par-

North Anson W. C. T. U. has a treasurer of whom it may well be proud, Mrs. Abigail P. French, born April 34, 1803, thus being 57 years old. It would well be worth one's time to take a journey to North Anson and talk with this bright woman concerning temperance, to the building up of which she has contributed so nobly. She is not only a total abstainer, but a prohibitionist, being fully informed upon all the phases of the temperance question. May God's blessings continue to rest sweetly upon her.

Major Merrill Reappointed.

The reappointment of Major George S. Merrill to the office of Insurance Commissioner by Gov. Brackett was not acomplished without considerable opposition. The protests which were sent to the Governor against it certainly id not speak very highly for Major Merrill's popularity. There was an endeavor to enlist the "sodder element" in his behalf, but it was quite apparent that the Veterans did not entiuse to any great extent in favor of his treappointment, and the attempt rather fell through.

However, although he could not very well that his eyes to the evident lack of Major (Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly by permission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadelphia.]

13, "And one of the company zaid unto Him." In the first verse of this chapter we are told that this company consisted of an innumerable multitude, such a throng that they trode one upon mother. The following verses down to this first one of our lesson tell us that in the midst of this multitude He taught His disciples that they should beware of the leaven (the hypocrisy) of the Pharisees; that they should beware of the leaven (the hypocrisy) of the Pharisees; that they should heve far the death of the body, but rather fear the death of soul and body in hell (compare Matt, x, 28); that they should not fear to deny Him before men, but rather fearlessly confess Him, looking to the future, and that they should any when arrested and brought before the authorities for His sake, for the Holy Spirit would teach them to say the right words at the right time. In order one we why the thus teaches His disciple, let the whole of the previous chapter after our

the right words at the right time. In order to see why He thus teaches His disciples, let the whole of the previous chapter after our last lesson be carefully read, and learn from it the attitude of the religious rulers of the nation towards Him, and remember that He knew that as they treated Him so they would in due time treat His followers.

"Master, speak to my brother, that he divide the inheritance with me." What an unseemly interruption! Jesus had been speaking of judgment and eternity, of future glory and future torment (xi, 20, 31, 32; xii, 5, 8, 9); but here is a man who is more interested in a share of some property in this world than in any future good or evil. He does not seem to have heeded anything that Jesus had said. And yet his is not an uncommon case, for untaught. Ezek. XXXIII, 31, well describes all such. **

14. "And He said unto him, Man, who made me a judge or a divider over you?"

The man did not know the Teacher whom he had thus addressed. The one seeking a share of an earthly inheritance was a man entirely of this world, while the one whom he asked to interfere on his behalf was a man not of this world. Jesus had come to lead people to the possession of an inheritance incorruptible, undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in Heaven (I Pet. i, 4). The glories of that inheritances He will divide and apportion to the overcomers in due time. (See Luke XXII, 28-30; Rev. XXI, 7; iii, 21; ii, 29, 27). But as to this present world, it is an evil one; it lieth in wickedness (or the wicked one); Satan is its acknowledged prince and god; we are not to love it, for its friendship is enmity with God, and it is reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men (Gal. i, 4; I John ii, XY; James iv, 4; II Pot iii, 6, 7).

What a poor place to possess an inheritance. How much batter to be content with food and raiment hero and wait for the redemption of this earth, when it shall rejoice in the liberty of the glory of the sons of God and we shall reign over it with Jesus Christ. 15. "And He said unto them, Take heed, and beware of covetousness." The tenth commandment forbids coveting. Moses was to choose rulers who were God fearing men, men of truth, hating covetousness. Ex. xx, 17; xviii, 21. The word has several meanings, such as a wish to have more, love of money, dishonest gain; the first is the meaning of the word here, and in Mark Vii, 20-23, it is classed by the Saviour with all manner of evil which proceeds from within and defles us. All can see that dishonest gain is 14. "And He said unto him, Man, who

it is classed by the Saviour with all manner of evil which proceeds from within and de-files us. All can see that dishonest gain is sinful, but some may question the sinfulness of a wish to have more either of money or sinful, but some may question the sinfulness of a wish to have more either of money or possessions.

16. "The ground of a certain rich man brought forth plentifully." Jesus now speaks a parable to make more clear to those who have ears to hear the truth He has presented. Here is an abundant harvest from the ground of one who knew not God. He is already rich and his riches are increased. God's rain and sunshine have done it, and yet it would seem as if the man was no child of God. It was this sort of thing that puzzled Asaph. He saw the ungodly prospering, increasing in riches, their eyes standing out with fatuess, having more than heart could wish, not in trouble nor plagued like other men, and yet blaspheming God (Ps. lxxiii); but as he waited upon God he saw the reason of it all and was led to rejoice more than ever in God Himself. Prospertly in the things of this world is no token of the favor of God.

17. "What shall I do, because I have no room where to bestow my fruits?" Thus this rich man thought within himself. His increase was an anxiety to him, he looked upon them as his fruits, evidently not thinking of the God who gave them to him, nor that the goodness of God was intended to lead him to repentance (Rom. ii. 4).

18. "And he said, This will I do: I will pull down my barns, and build greater; and there will I bestow all my fruits and my goods." He had talked with himself about it, and this was the decision of the most important person in the world, the only one who knew anything, the only one to be pleased, the only one worth living for, he himself. So the old barns come down, the large new ones go up, and there all my fruits and my goods."

19. "And I will say to my soul, Soul, thou hast much goods leid unform may was take."

one worth Iving for, he himself. So the old barns come down, the large new ones go up, and there all my fruits and my goods are carefully bestowed for the personal comfort of I myself.

19. "And I will say to my soul, Soul, then hast much goods haid up for many years; take thine case, eat, drink, and be merry." The soul to which he talked links him with the brute creation, for if they could not build barns, they could do any of these four things which he tells his soul to do, just as well shimself is obtaine talks simply as an ox or hog might talk (if they had the power of speech) which were being unconsciously fattened for the slaughter.

20. "But God said unto him, Thou foolt this night, thy soul shall be required of thee." How often thus suddenly does the summons come, and from the midst of earth's abundance the thoughtless one is cut off, not having been led to repentance by the goodness and forebearance and long suffering of God, they go out to find that while they have been laying up treasure on earth for their own enjoyment, they have also unconsciously been treasuring up unto themselves wrath against the day of wrath, and revelation of the righteous judgment of God (Rom, ii, 4, 5). That sike of the case, Companion—How do you manage and revelation of the righteous judgment of God (Rom. ii, 4, 5). That side of the case, however, is brought out more fully in the sequel to this story as given in chap. xvi, 19-31.

"Then whose shall those things be, which thou hast provided?" "He heapeth up riches and knoweth not who shall gather them." When he dieth, he shall carry nothing away; his glory shall not descend after him. "He that getteth riches, and not by right, shall leave them in the midst of his days, and at his end shall be a fool" (Ps. xxxvii, 9; xlix, 17; Jer. xvii, 11).

Weak Women.

The more sensitive nature of the female sex renders women much more susceptible than men to those numerous ills which spring from lack of harmony in the system. The nervous system gives way, sick headache is frequent, the appetite is lost, and other ailments peculiar to the sex cause great suffering. Houd's Sarsaparilla is peculiarly adapted for such cases, and has received the most gratifying praise for the relief it has afforded thousands of women whose very existence before taking it, was only misery. It strengthens the nerves, cures sick headache and indigestion, purifica and vitalizes the blood, and gives regular Life—life—let there be life!

Better a thousand times the roaring hours
When wave and wind,
Like the arch murderer in flight
From the avenger at his heel,
Storm through the desolate fastness
And wild waste places of the world!

Alfo-egive me life until the end,
That at the very top of being,
The battle spirit shouting in my blood,
Out of the reddest hell of the fight
I may be snatched and flug
Into the everlasting lull,
The immortal, incommunicable dream.

A Remarkable Blind Man.

A Remarkable Blind Man.

One of the most remarkable blind men in America is John B. Herreshoff, of Bristol, R. I., the head of one of the largest shipbuilding firms, Herreshoff Brothers, in the republic. He lost his sight at 15, and is now 60 odd. He supervises the financial affairs of the house and personally superintends every department of his business, employing hundreds of men. No one seeing him dictating letters, receiving reports, strolling about his shipyards giving orders to his foremen, would suspect his blindness.

Not for nearly fifty years has he seen the vessels that ply on the bay, but he carries their outlines clearly in his memory and draws on these for his designs for new craft. He can get an accurate idea of any model, or maferial body, by running his hand over it, and of any kind of machinery by hearing a description of it. He has great executive ability; has all the requisites of an eminent inventor, and it is believed that he would have rivaled John Ericsson but for his blindness. He has built some of the finest steam yachts now afloat, and he feels a pride in his calling that has grown with his years.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Houses on Fire.

"At this moment there are a hundred houses on fire and there occupants are not aware of it," said Chief of Battalion Benjamin A. Giequel. "Oh you needn't be surprised. I am stating facts. I have never said and never shall say anything truer in my life.

"Take, for instance, the case of the Hotel Bristol in East 11th street.

"How long did it take for that fire to burst out into flame? Possibly the start began when the first fire was started in the furnace during the winter. The flue from the furnace which struck the flue to the old grate was possibly clogged with dust and rubbish.

"One day fire touched off the furnace end of the accumulation. It began to burn like the slowest of slow punk or an old time fuse with nearly all the niter washed out of it. Now and then an odor of smoke in the house was detected and ascribed to another cause. Occasionally it may have died out to get new life from the furnace. The 'burn' gradually worked to air. When it got it up it went."—New York News.

Before We Turn to Dust.

How long will a human body remain in the earth before it decays until it cannot be distinguished from the surrounding clays, is a question as yet undecided by the scientists. Much depends upon the character of the soil and the different elements of which it is composed. In countries abounding in limestone, or, again, in regions thoroughly saturated with alkaline waters, human flesh will retain a natural color and firmness for an indefinite period of time. The bogs of Ireland have yielded up bodies, fresh and natural as life, that had been buried in their slimy depths for centuries. It is said to be a historical fact that the bodies of three Roman soldiers were found in a peat bog on the Emerald isle in the year 1569 A. D., fresh and life like, although they had been buried almost sixteen centuries.—St. Louis Republic.

ORIGIN OF TELEGRAPHY.

ORIGIN OF TELEGRAPHY.

A System That Was in Vogue Defore the Christian Era-Signals by Lights.
There was a system of telegraphy between the site of Chicago and that of the city of Mexicu before the days of Morse; before Franklin's discovery; before the discovery of America by Columbus—perhaps before the days of Christ. Such are the assertions of a Chicago Tribune correspondent who asks consideration of his statement on the following basis:

Chicago was certainly the northern terminus of a telegraph line whose other end was in Mexico, at so remote a period of the world's history that the very name of the race that built it is buried in oblivion. It was not the Indians. The ancestors of Tecumsch and Hiawatha are moderns compared with the earlier race.

The first telegraphic system was buried in oblivion. It was not the Indians. The ancestors of Tecumseh and Hiawatha are moderus compared with the earlier race.

The first telegraphic system was employed some centuries ago by that curious race of people that built the huge mounds of earth that are met with everywhere in the Mississippi valley and down to the Atlantic coast. We call the people of that age simply Mound Builders for want of a better name. The race is dead. The last man of terms and passed to his cternal rest long before this land became the home of the modern redmen. But the mighty works of those simple people live after them. We look upon their great earthworks, and like Voiney among his ruins, can only feel that to them is due our veneration. For them we must entertain at least a feeling of respect, being, as they are, the last remaining vestiges of a race most remaining the properties of a race in the last remaining vestiges of a race most remaining the properties of a race in the last remaining the properties of the first times, we have no data on which to buse a reliable history of this peculiar race of men. Our antiquarians tell us that they built substantial cities; that they were tillers of the soil; that they knew the principles of art; that they knew the principles of art; that they had a written language and a religion; that they had a commercial system, and that they and a commercial system, and the this implest thing imaginable. The writer did not claim for it the electric principle of the Morse telegraph. The electricity which Franktin found himself available in the hands of primitive people.

The Mound Builders' telegraphic system consisted of a chain of large mounds, starting at Chicago, hence bearing across the country to Prairie du Chien, Wis, thence down the Mississippi to Arkansas and onward in a more or less straight line to the terminus at the City of Mexico, then the capital of the Azte empire. These mounds were built in the most suitable locations, so that a fire lighted at one point could be seen distinctly at the next, and thus a signal light could be hastily transmitted from one station to another over the thousands of miles which separate the two terminal points of the line.

The signal stations are located often at a distance of many miles, perhaps a half dozen spanning a hundred miles; thus, as may readily be seen, a danger signal could be sent across a state with the speed of light. Around these signal mounds are usually grouped thousands of a lesser size, and sometimes a fortification or other earthwork, indicating that a city of a large size had originally existed on the spot.

Thus at Toolesboro, Ia., in addition to one of the most remarkable inclosure earthworks of the continent, there are mounds of all shapes and sizes, the number running up into the thousands. No better selection of a signal station could have been secured than this. On the very brow of a great bluff overlooking the Mississippi are located the eight huge conical mounds of earth upon which the signal fires were lighted, away back in another age of the world's history, telling a tale of danger or festivity. A light at this point would be instantly observed at Muscatine, the next station, twenty miles to the north, or Flint Hills, now Burlington, away in the hazy distance, thirty miles to the south, and thence could he transmitted from mound to at Muscatine, the next station, twenty miles to the north, or Flint Hills, now Burlington, away in the hazy distance, thirty miles to the south, and thence could be transmitted from mound to mound, from station to station, hundreds of miles in either direction.

This telegraphic system employed by the Mound Builders is the greatest wonder of the western world. Nor is it a myth, as so frequently originates in the fertile imagination of the newspaper writer, but the mounds and earthworks are there to show for themselves, and their purpose is self evident. Now forests have grown up, so that between many of the stations the line of observation is cut off; hence the line is out of repair; but students of archaeology assert and believe that the thousands of mounds in the long line from Chicago to Mexico City were, beyond a doubt, signal stations in the lirst and original telegraph system. st and original telegraph system.

Mummied Crocodiles.

British enterprise having been delighted with Egyptian cats, is now turning its attention to the crocodile pets at Manbeteh, where there is a rich mine of nitrates of immense extent. The crocodiles are laid like sardines in a box, with palm leaves between them, the interstices being filled up with myriads of eggs. The crocodiles are done up in bundles, covered with cloth. It is believed that beyond these are vaults containing mummied crocoare vaults containing mummied croco-diles, and in which vast treasures are stored.—Chicago Herald.

Going Round the Earth. Going Round the Earth.

The time required for a journey around the earth, by a man walking day and night, without resting, would be 428 days; an express train, 40 days; sound, at a medium temperature, 32½ hours; a cannon ball, 21½ hours; light, a little over one-tenth of a second; and electricity, passing over a copper wire, a little under one-tenth of a second—Exchange.

had married, one an eminent lawyer, the other a distinguished literary man. Literary man dies, and leaves younger sister a widow.

Some years roll away, and the widow lays aside her weeds. Now, then, it happens that a certain author and critic has occasion on a broiling day in summer to call on the eminent lawyer, husband of the elder sister. He inds the lawyer pleading and sweltering in a crowded court, sees that the lawyer is suffering dreadfully from the heat, pittes him, rejoices that he himself is not a lawyer, and goes for a cool saunter under the sheltering trees of a fashionable park and garden.

Among the ice eating, fanning crowd there, he meets the younger of the two sisters, and for a moment thinks he is talking to the elder.

"Oh, Mr. —," says the lady, "how dreadfully hot it is here!"

"how dreadfully hot it is here!"
"Yes, madam," replies our luckless critic, "it is hot here; but I can assure you the heat of this place isn't a circumstance when compared with the heat of the place where your poor dear husband is suffering today."

A horror stricken expression comes over the face of the lady; she rises from her chair, and flounces indignantly away.—New York Ledger.

The Decay of Revenge.

How surprising it would be to any Nineteenth century man who should read the I'salms for the first time at the age of reflection, to note how David (or whoever did that terrible cursing) was in continual collision with "enemies!" The word occurs ninety-four times in the 150 Psalms; thirty-five times joined with the possessive pronoun "mine." Can we conceive of Tennyson and Browning, not to speak of Charles Wesley and Whitter, giving enemies such a place in their hymns? Queen Victoria has a good deal larger frontier than David, and may be officially supposed to have enemies all over the globe; but even when we sing "God Save the Queen" we are content to wish their "knavish tricks" frustrated and their "politics" confounded, and do not want to take their little ones and dash them against the stones. But not only may we congratulate ourselves on the waning of the dread passions of hatred and revenge; we may also, I feel sure, rejoice in the positive development of the converse sentiments of benevolence and sympathy. The enthusiasm of humanity is a truly modern passion.—Frances Power Cobbe in Forum. The Decay of Revenge.

Saved by a Dog.

About 4,000 anecdotes have been published under the above title, in which dogs have figured in preserving human life. We had a dog once noted for saving things, but there wasn't a life among them. He kept the things he saved under the summer kitchen, and his hiding place wasn't discovered for a long time; not, indeed, until it became necessary to tear up the kitchen floor to find a good place to deposit some chloride of lime during a cholera season; then we found what had been "saved by a dog."

There were a couple of kittens, a cat, two or three rats and a chicken, all very dead; a large assortment of bones, the remnants of an ottoman, for the theft of which the best hired girl we ever had was discharged; a tomato can, a couple of teaspoons, a torn volume of Hoyle's games, an old hoopskirt, a canary bird, a nutmeg grater, a plaster of Paris pigeon and a cook book. It is rarely that there is so much saved by a dog, for they are generally improvident.—Texas Siftings.

Queer Mark Twain,

Whenever Mark Twain has a large dinner party at his home in Hartford, particularly when he has any Englishmen for guests, he is in the habit, it is said, of rising at what he considers the proper moment, without any warning or explanation, and beginning a set speech of a humorous kind. He usually occupies from fifteen to twenty minutes, and does his best to entertain and tickle his auditors. Sometimes his efforts, always premeditated and carefully prepared, are highly successful; sometimes they are not. Humor cannot be fabricated to order. But they are invariably laughed at, of course. It is an absolute requirement of common politeness that they should be, when a host demands laughter as a return for hospitality. Twain likes to be regarded as eccentric and original; and this is unquestionably original.—New York Commercial Advertuse.

Remarkable Ingredients.

Not long ago a young colored man brought in a bit of paper that called for nearly twenty different substances, among which were a lock of hair from the head of a baby, five whole black peppers, the tooth of a cat, a nail from the left hind paw of a dog, a bit of gum bezoin, and a drop of blood from the veins of a living man. All these were to be put together at midnight when the moon was in a certain quarter. To be taken internally? Oh, bless you, no. It was to be worn in a bag about the neck, and was, I fancy, the relic of some old darky superstition of plantation days.—Interview in New York Evening Sun.

All of their clothing comes from New York or Baltimore, and consists of the gaudiest of calicees and ginghams for the women, and the loudest of loud yellow checked trousers for the men. Their fondness for gaudy attire and trifles like mirrors, jackknives, cheap watches and silk hats amounts to a passion.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Need of Men, Not of Specialists.

The evil to be greatly apprehended, by reason of the tendencies of opinion in the popular mind of late, is, as it seems to me, that we shall bring forward a generation of imperfectly educated specialists in this country. No result is, in my judgment, more to be deprecated than this. Indeed, it may be doubted whether in every sense such a result could properly be regarded as progress at all. The fathers had at least a wide outlook, as far as their field of vision reached. They believed in men, not in mere workers in the great human workshop. They believed in individual men, full grown and matured in their whole manhood, and not in mere scholars or practitioners in some one section of life or knowledge, whose mental culture should be limited to that one section.

Men are what we need in this country; not lawyers, or physicians, or ministers, but men—men who, whatever may be thee vetent of their knowledge in their own peculiar science, know much that is beyond their science, and see the glory of all knowing and of all truth. Education, according to the true view of it, is like religion. It seeks the individuals who form the world. It desires, and tries, therefore, regarding this as its first and foremost work, to give completeness to each one whom it approaches.—President Dwight in Forum.

A Perfect Wife in Tangier.

A Moorish gentleman, one Hasan, related to me the history of his three marriages and descanted on the perfection of his present wife. The first, he said, was his cousin. He bought her beautiful clothes and furniture, but after some time she gave him words. Instantly he sent her back, with all he had given her, and took another wife. She had given him three girls, dead, and a boy, who still survives. The second wife went all right, till one day she took it into her head to go to the vapor bath without his permission. "Who gave you leave to go to the vapor bath without me?" he asked. "I don't require anybody's leave," answered she. "And immediately," he added, with that energetic downward pointing gesture, "I sent her home, with all the things I had ever given her." As regards the present wife, he was quite delighted with her. She made all the children's clothes and her own; she could sew with the machine; she cooked; she never required to buy a bottle of orange or rose water, so excellently did she prepare it herself—above all, she never wanted to go out! "Never once," he said, "has she asked leave to go out—not from one year's end to another! Never wants to leave the house or to see any one—never even crosses the street. The Great Northern Highway.

Three years ago the writer read an article about the Canadian Pacific railway with a smile of incredulity. It sounded odd in his ears then, but in view of the present facts, and of the spectacle of cities springing up as if by magic, where but yesterday a wilderness was, he finds that it reads like prophecy now. One sentence of that article may pardonably be quoted here to point a moral and adorn this tale. It is as follows: "With just pride in her work, the greatest, perhaps, that has ever been accomplished by human hands, Canada presents this property to the empire as her contribution to her power and unity—a new highway to Britain's possessions in the east, guarded throughout by loyal hearts. But she will not rest with this. Her new iron girdle has given a mareir impulse to her fields, her visce Her new iron girdle has given a mag netic impulse to her fields, her mines and her manufactories, and the modest colony of yesterday is today an energetic nation with great plans and hopes and aspirations."—Walter P. Poets and the Stock Market.

"Among American poets," said a book dealer, "Longfellow has the lead, my sales of Longfellow being about equal to that of Swinburne. Lowell is a popular poet, but he is at a disadvantage in that no uniform edition of his works has ever been published. Emerson has a fair sale; nothing extra. Do you know that the stock market affects considerably the sale of valuable books? A broker who has made a good day of it will stop in and order a fine edition of some author's works without regard to the cost. The dull market depresses the high class book trade."—New York Star.

Woman Suffcage in Congress.

It is the West which shows its power again in the majority report on the bill introduced by Representative Baker of New York, providing for a constitutional amendment enfranchising women. In the West a generation has grown up wholly untouched by Eastern ideas or prejudices in regard to the fit place for women. Co-education in Oberlin, in the strong and scholarly University of Michigan, and in the hundreds of small colleges, academies, high schools of Michigan, and in the hundreds of small colleges, academies, high schools and normal schools of the West, has had already an enormous and unesti-mated influence. Thousands of young people study side by side, instructed by professors who were instructed at Harvard or Yale, Columbia, Heidel-berg, or Oxford. These students have no thought—the knowledge certainly, but not the realization—that there is no thought—the knowledge certainly, but not the realization—that there is any other system of education. This is the average Western man's rearing nowadays. With his keen sense of humor, he feels, when he goes to Congress, that it would be ridiculous to oppose any measure acknowledging woman's right to vote if they want to. 'And if you don't want to, you ought to see that you've got it to do,' is the succinct prophetic philosophy of the succinct prophetic philosophy of the Western congressman to the women with whom, when they were girls at school, he used to study logic and civil

A son marque is a small copper coin made in France for use in Louisiana when a French possession. It was well known in Illinois, Missouri and Northwest Territory until within the last forty years. Its value was about one cent, corresponding with the "un son" of Bas Canada. We had sou marques, flips, bits and many other coins now to the people of the East. Alas, alas, they have all gone with the good old days when they were current. Some marques are counterfeits of foreign copper coins that were made for circulation in the British West Indies. Or possibly the royal sous of Louisiana stamped with R. F. by the French Republic.

"Curious that fashion we have of taking off our hats after—well, to a lady, you know, after she has—after she's gone by, isn'tit."

"I don't know, I'm sure. I never noticed it."

"Well, naturally you wouldn't because, you know, you'd have gone by."

I knew I was talking like a simperting idiot, but I couldn't stop myself.

"That's what I was saying. The lady never knows you take off your hat because—unless she turns round—and they don't generally—ah—turn round, you know. Then, of course, how is she to know you do take off your hat? I think that—very often they—ah—don't know, you know. Sometimes they think—they—sometimes think that a person doesn't recognize—that is, doesn't take off his hat when he does—after they've gone by."

By this time Mrs. Brinsmeade was looking at me with both fear and astonishment. LESSON XII, SECOND QUARTER, IN-TERNATIONAL SERIES, JUNE 22.

Text of the Lesson, Luke xii, 22-34-Com mit Verses 27, 28—Golden Text, Luke xli, 30—Commentary by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

(Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly by permission of II. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadel-phila.)

22. "And He said unto His disciplas, Therefore I say unto you, Be not anxious for your life, what ye shall eat; nor yet for your body, what ye shall put on" (R. V.) The previous verse, which is the last verse of the last lesson, contrast treasure in this world for one's self, and treasure with God, which is enduring. Men who live only for this world will naturally seek treasure here; but disciples of Christ who are no longer of this world should seek to have their treasure where they belong. His disciples may have thought, as He told of the man building larger barns in which to store his corn, well, we shall not be troubled that way; but the question with us is, now that we have left all to follow Him, what about the necessaries of life, our food and raiment which we actually need. If these were their thoughts He read them, and met them with the command, "Take no thought," or "Be not anxious," even for these things. Obedience to this command would take out of many lives about three-fourths of all their trouble. Then in Phil, iv, 6, is the command to be auxious about nothing, which will certainly cover the other fourth, so that there is no permission for a single anxious thought in the life of a Christian.

23. "The Hoff is more than meat, and the

if we do the one thing here commanded, all the temporal things we need shall be added.

22. "Fear not, little flock, for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the Kingdom," They are to have no anxiety about such temporal things as food and raiment; they are also to have no anxiety about the Kingdom for themselves. Their Father, whose children they now are, will surely see to their eternal as well as temporal welfare.

23. "Sell that ye have and give alms; provide yourselves * * a treasure in the heavens that falleth not," etc. There is such a thing as adding to our treasure is heaven.

34. "For where your treasure is here will your heart be also." The hearts of Israe were often back in Expry; the heart of Lots wife was in Sodom; the hearts of Israe.

Well, that's what that man does—were of no use to God.

THE VERY BEGINNING.

Something About the Fermation of This World as it "Whiteld in Space."

In the burning mass that composed our earth at first, there existed copper, sulplur and all the other substances that are on and in our earth now, only all were in a gaseous state. The cold had not yet hardened them into solids. They tell us that this collection of burning material belonged originally to the sun, and was thrown off from it in consequence of a natural law, and sent "whirling in space." Do you understand what that word "space means? This globe of ours is wrapped up in a huge cloak, some forty miles thick, called the atmosphere. Beyond this thick envelope stretches far away that unknown region called "space." What are its boundaries, no one can tell us. Whether it holds other worlds than ours we can only guess. But one thing about it is known for certain, which is, that it is very cold. Its temperature is about 200 degs, below zero; so we have need of our thick, warm atmosphere.

What effect did this intense cold have upon the mass of fiery gas, sent spinning out through its depths? Just the same effect that the cold mountain peaks have upon the vapor of water. It cooled the gases upon the outside, hardened them, and in the course of time formed a thin crust. This was God's first day of creation, and some men think it was equal to thousands and thousands of our years—maybe millions—because this forming of the crust it was! Then the boiling, seething mass inside broke through, and the work had to be done all over again.

When the Veryor of water was condensed, rain began to fall.

Windows That Are Open.

The sort of windows that should be closed most of all are found to be always open. They are the glass fronts of barber shops and boarding house eating rooms. If any man thinks himself an object of general interest or particular admiration when swathed in a long bib and soapsuds he should be informed of his mistake. Women fairly run by barber shop windows. The sight of their noble lords laid over chairs with knives at their throats is too appalling.—Buffalo Express.

The benefits of vacation season may be greatly enhanced, if, at the same time the blood is being cleaned and vitalized by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. A good appetite, fresh vigor, and buoyant spirits attend the use of ithis wonderful medicine.

General Alger, at the close of the war, arrived in Detroit without a cent in his pocket, and was obliged to borrow money with which to pay his board bill. At present he owns 200 square miles of pine lands in Michigan, and is generally supposed to be worth $20,000,000.

said a Washington dealer in that line very frankly.
"In the first place, no really expensive piano is ever rented; the risk would be too great for one thing. One could not afford to intrust to a stranger an instrument worth from $800 to $1,800, which is about the range for the linest makes. The pianos hired out are of a lower grade, worth from $300 to $500."
"But wint is the charge?"

"Decidedly so. That is just the point of my remark. I don't know any other investment that pays from 25 to 30 per cent, per aunum. We have twenty pianos let all the time, and you can perceive that they must bring about $2,000 a year."

a loosened action and other damage done that costs more to repair than we have received for the piano, the usc. al method being to pay something like $25 down and to give notes of hand for $10 each, falling due monthly, for the balance. It goes without saying that installment customers often default in their payments, and then we simply grab the pianos. People who purchase in that way never seem to be aware that in law an article so bought remains the property of the seller until the last cent due has been paid. So, in order to have that little fact thoroughly comprehended, we introduce it as a part of the contract which the customer is obliged to sign before he gets the instrument.—Washington Star.

CHAOS IN THE ORCHESTRA. Little Devil with the Face of a Saint

A little Devil with the Face of a Salat Was the Cause of It All.

The prettiest girl in a whole nest of beauties that sat in a box at the comic opera the other night was one of those irrepressible creatures that famine or death could not control. She looked gentle and good. Beside the roseate flush that beamed over here cheeks there was a deviltry of manner about her that could not have been absolutely innate. It so chanced that the stout and bald gentleman playing upon the base viol stood immediately beneath the box wherein the pretty girl was sitting, so close to her, in fact, that the long handle of his viol extended upward almost to her perfect nose. For some moments after the opera began the girl gazed interestedly at the instrument without apparently listening to the music that progressed on the stage. Then, while no one but herself was watching, she leaned forward and, extending a gloved hand, twirled one of the keys out of place. There was, a moment later a severe discord that caused the leader of the orchestra to glance sharply round, and then the prima donna was thrown out of tune by the false notes that continued to come from the big fiddle. The fat player reached excitedly up to the keys of his instrument and placed it into tune again, but no sooner had he done so than the wicked girl in the box reached forward and unscrewed several of the keys at once.

done so than the wicked girl in the box reached forward and unscrewed several of the keys at once.

It was an important point during a solo, while the viol was being utilized as the principal accompaniment, and the horrible discords that poured forth were more than the audience could bear. The prima donna stopped short in her song, the orchestra conductor banged his baton madly against his music rack, and every player in the band lost his head, the result being chaos of the worst kind. And while this insanity reigned the cause of it all, the pretty girl in the box, sat calmly back in her chair, making faces of sorrow at the misfortune that prevailed around her. When the player of the bass viol got his instrument back into condition again and the opera was progressing smoothly the mischievous beauty looked fully as innocent as the best scholar in a convent school, and no one but she and I was conscious that she was a little devil with the face of a saint.—New York Letter.

Sersational Newspapers.

It is usually assumed that the sole responsibility for the sensationalism and vulgarity of a portion of the American press rests upon its publishers and conductors. Now, it is a truism to say that there would be less criticism of the actions of others if every one felt a due responsibility for his own actions. The purveyor of scandal and sensational news does not merely offer to satisfy an existing demand, but he stimulates and creates an appetite by which he profits. He is not indeed responsible for the taste of the world, but he is responsible for any action of his that makes it worse. This desire for publicity has been cultivated by the newspapers, but did they create it? Would the newspapers continue to minister to it if the public did not sustain them? We are enraged at the journals for daily violations of privacy that should be sacred, but who buys the journals? Whatever the newspapers are, is into about time the public began to consider its responsibility in the case?

The fair conclusion of the whole matter seems to be that the American people have the sort of newspapers they prefer. An increasing number, in doubt, prefer a clean and trustworthy newspaper. But in this country we are estimated by majorities.—Charles Dudley Warner in Forum.

Rev. J. G. Wood, the naturalist, in his new book on animals, says: "Another fact almost as astonishing as this is that wild animals are completely fascinated and can be tamed by perfumes. There was a Mrs. Lee in India who had a tame leopard that played in the house with her children. He was very inquisitive, as all of the cat tribe are, and loved to stand on his hind legs and with his fore paws on the window sill look out at the passers by. When the children wanted the place for ghemselves they would all take hold of his tail and pull him down by that.

"He was generally very amiable, but sometimes, his claws being very sharp, the children were scratched. So Mrs. Lei taught Sal to keep his claws sheathed by giving him when he did so a little paper tray on which lavender water had been dropped. This would throw him into transports of delight. He would tear the paper into bits and roll over with them on the floor," Mr. Wood says that with nothing but a bottle of lavender water he himself has become the best of friends with a leopard, a tigress and a lioness in the menagerie.

A Curious Custom.

The curious custom at Queen's college, Oxford, of presenting a needle and thread to each of the guests at a banquet is a pious memorial of the founder, Robert Eaglesfield, on whose name "aiguille et fils," forms a kind of rebus. The story goes that Henry IV (whose son, afterwards Henry V, was a somewhat riotous member of the institution), complained to the authorities of the expense and wastefulness of the college, whereupon the youthful prince made his next appearance before his royal father with needles hanging from the eyelet holes of his doublet, in order to bear testimony to his newly resolved thrift.—Montreal Star.

For a specimen of this moth Dr. Clifton was paid $100 two years ago by the Earl of Roseberry, who is quite an enthusiast in that line. The present specimen is valued at $50.—New York Telegram.

"Is there much profit in the soda water business? Well, I should say there is," remarked a druggist, "The beauty of the business is that the profit is unlimited. You can make 100 per cent. or 1,000, just as easily as not. It depends on your degree of honesty, and how you regard the tastes and stomachs of your customers. If you wish to retain their trade you will give them a good article, profit 100 per cent.; if you cater for transient customy ou make 1,000 per cent. That is the difference.

"Oh, well, now I don't care to give away many of the secrets of the business, but I don't object to giving the uninitiated a gentle hint. I will say that any reliable dealer can, for a nickel a glass, give a man real fruit flavors, actual cream and high pressure water, and still double his money. Such a decoction per glass would cost two and one-half cents, but I will wager that the average soda water that is drunk here or elsewhere doesn't cost more than a cent, and sometimes less than that.

"To begrin with, a saving is often made in lowering the pressure, and the result is the water doesn't sparkle. It is insipid, and you instinctively feel when you drink it that it lacks something. Then the alleged fruit flavors are made out of cheap ethers and other volatile substances. True, they are not harmful and they can be guzzled with impunity, but the delicate aroma is not there and the cost is a trifle. For a dollar a dealer can make a large quantity of these cheap flavors. Chocolate is another article that is easily adulterated. As for the Saratoga waters, they are frequently manufactured in the cellar out of salts."—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Used to Riding Thoroughbreds.

A wealthy rancher of Wyoming territory recently related a story of a rich young Englishman who, while looking about the west for good investments, visited his ranch. He stayed there a few days, and one afternoon as the cowboys were about to round up a bunch of cow ponies the young man said that he would enjoy a good ride in the saddle. He said he was used to riding only thorough-breds, and he didn't think they had a horse good enough for him. The boys convinced him that they had one of the linest horses on the plains, and if he knew how to ride he was welcome to the animal.

He was apparently insulted when questioned about hisability to ride and answered that he could ride any kind of a horse. A sleepy looking bronce was brought out from the corrals and saddled. Though he appeared half dead he was the worst bucker in the herd. "Es lifeless," said the foreigner, when the pony was brought to lim. The boy said the "nag" would wake up after the first mile, and the visitor got into the saddle. He didn't linger long. The first buck jump placed him on the horse's neek, and after a second he was in the atmosphere. He turned a double somer-sault and landed on the sharp end of a cactus plant. When he picked himself up one of the boys asked what he thought of the thoroughbed now. The question made the Englishman turn pale. "Es a good oss," he answered. "but 'e lopes too bloomin' "igh."—Chicago Tribune.

Defense of the Small Boy.

Defense of the Small Boy.

It is unfortunately the case that every small boy 's not in a position financially to become the owner of a pair of roller skates. Only the exceptional youth enjoys such a possession. Does one, then, see these lucky fledgings of manhood skating about over the asphalt in proud consciousness of their superior means of pleasure and locomotion? Quite otherwise. One does observe roller skates in use on every hand, but it is rarely that a single small boy is using two of them at once. Almost invariably he is seen sliding along on one skate with a succession of impulses conveyed by the other unskated foot.

Now, why should this be so? For what reason is it that the small boy so seldom has more than one skate? Simply because he has either lent the other skate to a companion or borrowed from him the one he has on. Thus you will ordinarily see these small boys skating in pairs, each with one skate, and so dividing the sport. Rarely does it appear that the owner of a pair of skates uses them both himself instead of sharing the pleasure with a friend.

Who says, then, that the small boy is a selfish being?—Washington Star.

A Mighty Beast.

Few, even among the most thought ful of the gents homo, ever stop to consider the immense size of the great greenland or Bright whale (Balena mysticetus, L.) Nilson says that it will weigh over 100 tons. Just think of it, 220,000 pounds! At that rate the gigantic creature would outweigh 83 of the largest elephants or a half a thousand grizzly bears. Sliced in chunks of 1,000 pounds each, his carcass would load a freight train of 11 cars to its fullest capacity. The whale-bone in such a whale would weigh as much as three of the largest Norman horses, and his oil would fill 150 kerosen barrels.—St. Louis Republic.

Now that electricity is so generally employed for the removal of warts and facial imperfections, the following description in Medical Raview of the method employed by Dr. Patrzek, of Oppeln, is of interest: He first thoroughly moistens the wart with a warm solution of sait. Both needles are then thrust through it just above the surface of the skin and the current turned on, one element after another being added until pain is felt. Five cells are sufficient. With most cases two statings of five minutes each are sufficient to destroy the growth, which gradually dries up and falls away, leaving a surface at first slightly reddened, but which later assumes the appearance of normal skin.

PHENOMENA OF DREAMS.

The Strange Impressions and Sensations
Experienced During Sieep.

It is told of the tyrant Dionysius that one morning one of his intimate friends and boon companions told him that he had dreamed the night before of cutting Dionysius' throat, whereupon Dionysius caused him to be put to death, justifying his act by the assertion that unless the dreamer thought of such a thing in his waking moments he could not have dreamed it when asleeep.

Could Not Conceive of Such a Law.

The quarter now closing opens with the first clear announcement of the essential principle of Christ's gropel and continues with alternate miracle and teaching to the closing lesson on the fatherhood of 60d. The pupil who would be rooted and grounded in the Christian faith should at the very start face the fact that the sermon on the mount is utterly at war with what we call human acture—that it is, in every sense of the word, truly a stumbling block. It is lite to did sense whether human nature, so called, is really worthy of the name, or whether it is simply a fallen and debased nature. The fact every student of our holy faith must face at the start, and the point he must be prepared to defend, is that the natural man is there flatly forbidden to follow the dictates of his nature.

"Love your enemies. Pray for them which despitefully use you. Give to every man that asketh of thee. Judge not and ye shall not be judged. Be ye mereful, as your Father also is mereful." Human nature mover prompted these sentiments, and human wisdom never uttered that millions of human beings have in a poor, feeble way even approximated towards an obselience of their persecutors, that men and women of whom the world was not worthy have suffered every indignity which human mallice could invest, and a public with the star man and the fact that millions of human beings have in a poor, fee it noted, cannot be cited for any other faith, and is not denied by the most skeptical historian.

Tae stumbling block is seen when one inquires how far the maxims should be carried in every day life, and the devout student should not seek to evade or deny it. It is an intelligence in the student in a present of the student has profile to ever the mexims should be carried in every day life, and the devout student should not seek to evade or deny it. It is an intelligence in the student has a profile to be a student of the profile of the profi see through a glass darkly" to frankly admit our ignorance and hope for future engiptement. The libite is not like a novel or a newspaper, to be read once, fully understood and then laid aside. It is to be read daily and diligently through life, with the perfect confidence that new light will come with each reading.

The parable of the rich fool and the concluding lesson on trust in God amplify previous lessons and most appropriately bring believers to the practical exportation, "Fear not, little flock." The coming quarter's lessons will show each addition raising the disciples to successively higher conceptions of the Christian life.

Removing Warts with Electricity.

Now that electricity is so generally employed for the removal of warts and facial imperfections, the following description in Medical Rasiaw of the method provided and provided and provided and provided and punished for various offenses. When the case of young doctors would be to expose people to the risk of all sorts of malpractice. It is a much lighter matter for a man to lose his property through the blunders of a young and inexperienced lawyer than fore we are solemally tried before the magistrate and condemned to death for having killed a man.—All the Year Round.

A Blessed Invention.

A Blessed Invention.

A BETTER PICTURE.

When he returned to the hotel the clerk asked him if he liked the famous picture.

"Oh, yes, liked it well enough, but I dhave to be mighty flush who may and care mighty flush who may and care mighty little for it before I would give $110,000 for it. Put a sassafras frame 'round it and hang it up in a barn where there was a dainee goin' on, and I low that not one man in fifty would take any notice of it. Oh, the paint is well alid on—smooth and all that—but it ain't worth the money, that's all. I've seen many a picture that I wouldn't swap for it—got one myself it all I wouldn't swap for it—got one myself that I wouldn't swap for it—got one myself it all I wouldn't swap for it—got one myself that I wouldn't swap for it—got one myself it is a powerfully interestin' piece of work, I can tell you. There is the Saviour and his disciples, with Judas a soppin' in the dishi; and there is John, with love and tenderness writ all over his face; and there is Peter, good and true, but withal a little shakey, as the vote afterward shows. There is Thomas, with a sort of shrewd expression of doubt on his face. The table ain't none too fine—looks like two trestles with some plank put aeross 'en, but when you come down to the paint you'll find it right there. There ain't no minein' matters; no stinginess. The man that painted it jest snatched up his bresh and went to work. He didn't slight one part by makin' some other a leetle redder or a little bluer, but he was fair an' honest an' treated 'em all alike. He was what I call a honest man. Some painters, sign painters, mostly, have slighted their work, but this man didn't. He understood his obligation and followed it out. He was a man of the was made after his body had been taken from the grave at St. Helena in 1840, after it had been buried for nineteen years. This is a remarkable picture, showing how perfectly the features were preserved so many years after death, and giving a striking view of the strong lines of his face.

The history of the picture is also remarkable. The portrait was made by an eminent French artist by order of Louis Philippe directly after the body had been exhumed at St. Helena. The original was a medallion about four inches in diameter, set in pearls. When Louise Philippe lost his throne and was obliged to leave France, one of his officers, who departed at the same time, took the medallion of Bonaparte and carried it away with other articles of value. The officer, whose name has been lost, came to Bath with Capt. William Drummond. The officer emained in Bath for over a year, and then went back to France, leaving the medallion in Capt. Drummond's care. Some years afterward Capt. Drummond received a letter from the officer asking that the picture be sent over to Paris to him. Dr. Isaac Ilsley Cummings, of this city, was commissioned by Capt. Drummond, He returned it to Capt. Drummond, the could not find the owner. He therefore retained the picture and brought it back to Portland. He returned it to Capt. Drummond, first having a daguerreotype copy of it made by the captain's permission. The original is now apposed to be in the possession of Capt. Drummond's daughter, who is an immate of some religious institution in France, near Paris. The copy was kept by Dr. Cummings for thirty-live years or more, and was then given by him to William H. Green, of Prince's express, in this city, who still retains possession of it.

The daguerreotype is as perfect as the day it was taken, and shows not a sign of fading. The original may not be in existence, or it may possibly have been returned to the French government by Capt. Drummond's daughter. This does not appear likely, however, for if it had been some one would have seen it before this are extant.

The picture has been shown to a number of Frenchmen; among others, to one who saw Napoleon's body in 1840, when it lay in state at Paris. They all pronounce it a remarkable and striking likeness.—Portland (Me.) Cor. Philadelphia Press.

Hanging for Amusement.

Two remarkable examples are on record of persons who allowed themselves to be hung for the entertainment of an audience. An account of one of them'is given: The man's real name was John Harnshaw, but he performed throughout England under the high sounding name of M. Gouffe. He was an athlete, and among other feats it was customary with him to exhibit the process of hanging. In this performance he relied for security on the strength of the muscles of the throat and neck alone. He had a rope with a fixed knot that would not slip, and passed both ends of the loop up behind one ear.

The whole act was so adroity managed that he prevented any pressure of the rope upon the windpipe or the jugular vein, and could even stain the weight of 120 pounds in addition to that of his own body. On three separate occasions Harnshaw mismanaged the rope and became unconscious, but was, luckily, rescued each time. Dr. Chowne, who writes the account, says truly: It cannot be doubted that as far as sensation and consciousness are concerned Harnshaw mismanged through the whole ordeal of dying, and had he been permitted to remain hanging until actually dead he would have passed through the whole ordeal of dying, and had he been permitted to remain hanging until actually dead he would have passed out of existence without further knowledge of his misery. Harnshaw said, not with particular reference to 'either of the accidents, but in speaking of his performanances collectively, that he could recollect nothing which happened to him after the rope tightened, and duat he lost his senses all at once.

The moment the rope got in the wrong place he felt the change, and could not breathe; felt as if he would like to loosen himself, but never thought of using his hands. He experienced the heaviness of legs and arms mentioned by others who have been half hung and then rescued, and the rattling sound in his cars, but never saw sparks of light, which are the usual phenomena.—Philadelphia Times.

A Bright Dog Mendicant.

Most all the men have learned what that means, and few of them fail to re-spond. A penny is placed in a paper bag and "Don" seizes it between his teeth. The door is opened for him and off he trots to the bakery just above. His scratch on the door is familiar and he quickly gains entrance. The bag is taken from his mouth, a cake placed within it, and off the dog trots complacently to his corner in the store, where he patiently awaits his master.

but had a strong disinclination to being beaten. Report said that when he discovered the danger of a checkmate, he would often be so long in considering his next move as to tire out his adversary, and the game would end in a "draw."

A similar "masterly inactivity" is often shown by selfish people who hope by doing nothing when something should be done to gain an advantage. An anecdote, told in "Glimpses of Life in Westborough," illustrates this trait of human selfishness. "Don" catches it in his mouth like a professional,
"Put your paw on that piece," says the master, as another is broken off.
Down goes the paw on the delicate morsel, and without a sign of imparience it is kept there until the words "all right now" come from the master.

ter.
"This piece is poison," says Fireng, as he places another fragment close to the dog's nose: "don't eat it." The animal backs off and eyes it askance till the words "all right" are again given, when he snaps it up greedily. Never has Don opened the bag to get the cake without his master's permission, and never has he attempted to keep cake and penny too.—Philadelphia Record.

Fur That is Worth its Weight in Gold. It is not generally known that some of the most expensive fur producing animals are killed off the coast of the state of Washington, and it is remarkable that the extent of territory where these animals are taken is so extremely limited, being only from Damon's Point, at the northern entrance to Gray's harbor, up the coast to Point Greenville, a distance of about twenty-four miles. The animal referred to is the sea otter, the fur of which is manufactured into the robes of the potentates and princes of the old world.

Unlike that of the seal, the fur of the sea otter requires no plucking of How far this youth's mother might have been disposed to approve of this peculiar method of locomotion it impossible to say; but, after all, that is not the point,—Washington Star.

The skin shed by a rattlesnake which was found on the bank of the Illinois river and is now preserved at a boys' seminary at Tahlequah, in the Indian territory, measures 13 feet long, is 14½ inches in circumference and has 15 buttons. The person who has examined, measured and reported upon it says that it is a very dry skin, and therefore assumes that it shrunk considerably in drying, but this is not so, as the skin of a snake is thoroughly dry when shed, and consequently represents the full size of a snake.—Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

In England a great sensation educational circles has just been caused by the publication of the mathematical tripos of Cambridge University. The success of the girl students has been remarkable. The highest educational honor yet won by women has been won by Miss Philippa Fawcett, aged twenty-two, who is bracketed as superior to the senior wrangler. Previous to this the first place was occupied by a Miss Ramsay, who took the first rank in the classical tripos of 1887, and has since Ramsay, who took the arst rank in the classical tripos of 1887, and has since married the master of Trinity College, Cambridge. In addition to Miss Faw-cett's fine achievement, two ladies figure in the list of wranglers, ten are figure in the list of wranglers, ten are senior optimes and four are junior optimes. No woman failed to pass, but six men failed completely. Miss Fawcett is a daughter of the late Prof. Henry Fawcett, the blind postmastergeneral of England, and of Mrs. Millicent Garrett Fawcett, a leading advocate of woman suffrage, and the author of a text book on Political Economy which is used in several American colleges.
